HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTH INFANTRY.

The rivalry created under the call for soldiers in July, 1862, influenced the people of Logan county to endeavor to make up a complete Regiment from the county, notwithstanding four full companies had before been enlisted in the county and that their depleted ranks had been filled by recruits from the same. Within thirty days from July 15th, eight companies were enlisted from the county when Company A, from Sangamon county and Company K, from Menard county made the Regiment complete.

The regiment went into camp at Lincoln, August 15, and was mustered into the United States service September 18th. It was drilled for a time by Lieutenant Colonel Adams, formerly of the Regular Army.

Moved from camp November 7th via St. Louis, to Columbus, Ky., arriving November 10th and moved thence to Jackson, Tenn. The Regiment was broken into detachments and detailed as provost guards in Jackson and also as a guard up and down the track of the M. & O. R. R. for some twenty or thirty miles on either side of Jackson.

Lieutenant Colonel Campbell was detailed as provost marshal of Jackson. On Dec 6th occurred the first death in the Regiment, E. Rankin of Company C, died on that day. While at Jackson, Captain P. W. Harts was placed under arrest for refusing to guard rebel prisoners at the residence of their rebel friends instead of at the guard house. His company was soon afterward relieved from provost duty and with Company I, sent to O'Bion river bridge on the M. & O. R. R. Company G and part of Company C were sent eight miles north of Jackson to Carroll station. On December 17th Jackson was attacked by General Forrest, and Companies C and G surrendered without resistance on the morning of December 20th. Companies H and I were also attacked by General Forrest. Captain Harts, who had been released from arrest and had joined his command on the 19th, had taken the precaution to construct temporary breastworks of some bridge timber. The rebel force made a severe attack, which continued from noon until dark, but were finally repulsed with severe loss. On the night of December 20th, part of Company C, commanded by Lieutenant Johnson, was attacked in the block house and after a severe fight of several hours drove the enemy off, after killing and wounding quite a number. In neither of these engagements was any of our men killed or wounded.

At the O'Bion River fight Sergeant Henry Fox, of Company H, climbed up the timbers of the bridge and crossed it under the fire of the whole Rebel force, on his way to Jackson for reinforcements, and although it was a perilous undertaking, yet he reached Jackson in perfect safety. After Forrest's raid, the Regiment was sent farther north to guard railway stations.

The prisoners paroled by General Forrest were sent to Benton Barracks, and were exchanged late in the summer of 1863. The balance of the Regiment was ordered to Bolivar in March, and about May 31st it moved to Vicksburg. While enroute there the boat in which the Regiment was conveyed was fired into at close range while off Island 63 by several companies of Rebel infantry and two pieces of cannon. Captain Beezely's son was killed at the first fire. A few others were killed and about 25 wounded.

After serving in the trenches at Vicksburg a few weeks, the regiment was sent forty miles up the Yazoo river to repel a Rebel force at that point.

Returning by forced marches, harrassed by the enemy and the extreme hot, burning weather, many of the soldiers were overcome by heat, and the Regiment lost more men on that trip than from any other cause during its term of service. The Regiment served in the lines at Vicksburg until after the surrender of the place. Immediately after this it was ordered to Helena and took part in the advance on Little Rock, and participated in its capture. From this time the Regiment was on duty in Arkansas until the close of the war. It took a prominent part in the battle of Clarendon, and performed service at Duvall's Bluff, Pine Bluff, Benton, Hot Springs, Lewisburg, St. Charles, Dardanelle and Brownsville.

Except the siege of Vicksburg, the Regiment was not in any of the most noted battles, but, nevertheless, it performed well its part in putting down the rebellion, and it suffered many privations and hardships marching through swamps and bayous, guarding railroads, government property, fighting, foraging, as is proven by its long list of casualties.

The Regiment was mustered out of service July 12th, 1865, at Pine Bluff, Ark., and arrived at Camp Butler, Ill., July 24th, 1865, where it received final payment and discharge.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Seventh Regiment Illinois Volunteers was mustered into the United States service at Camp Butler, Ill., Sept. 4, 1862, and was composed of six companies from DeWitt and four companies from Piatt counties.

September 30, 1862, Regiment left Camp Butler for Jeffersonville, Ind., where it arrived on the morning of October 1. Owing to want of drill and discipline, it was ordered into camp, where it remained until October 12, employing the time in drill and otherwise preparing for active field service.

Crossed Ohio River, October 12, to Louisville—General Buell's Army, meantime, having moved in direction of Perryville. Remained in Louisville until October 18, when it was ordered to Elizabethtown, Ky., to meet the rebel General John Morgan, who was advancing in that direction. A slight skirmish ensued between the One Hundred and Seventh and Morgan's advance, which resulted in the capture of some of the enemy and no casualties to the Regiment.

Moved, thence, to Mumfordsville, Ky., early in December following, where it remained until March, 1863, when it left for Glasgow, remaining there until the following June.

The Twenty-third Army Corps, being organized, by order General Burnside, Brigadier General H. M. Judah was ordered to Glasgow, to assume command of all troops organizing for the Second Division, Twenty-third Army Corps. Department of the Ohio; and the One Hundred and Seventh Illinois, being assigned to this Division, marched, on the 18th of June, for Tompkinsville, Ky., on Cumberland River, in order to meet an anticipated movement of John Morgan, who was preparing for the invasion of Kentucky. Followed him to Mumfordsville, Ky., and from thence, by rail, to Louisville, and then, by steamer, to near Buffington Island, where he was finally captured.

Returned to Lebanon, Ky., late in August, when after reorganizing, proceeded with General Burnside on Campaign of East Tennessee. General Judah, being in delicate health, was relieved by General Julius White, who assumed command of the Division August 24.

The enemy retiring from East Tennessee, the command arrived at Loudon, September 1, 1863. Remained there until middle of October; then proceeded toward Greenville. Having marched some sixty miles east of Knoxville, received orders to counter-march, and moved, with all speed, to the assistance of General Rosecrans. Reached Sweet Water, 75 miles north of Dalton, where it heard of the battle of Chickamauga.

Returned to Loudon, where was soon confronted by advance of Longstreet. Retired to north side Holston River, where it remained until November 13, when it was ascertained that the enemy had effected a crossing, by aid of pontoons, at Huff's Ferry, 4 miles below. Division retired to Lenoris Station. Was met by General Burnside, who ordered a counter-march in direction of enemy, who was found 3 miles below Loudon. Company A,

One Hundred and Seventh Illinois, as skirmishers, commanded by Captain Milholand, attacked the enemy's skirmishers, who retired. Line was formed and an attack made by the whole Division, driving the enemy back to pontoons. Regiment lost one killed and several wounded.

Encamped on night 15th of November, at Lenoris. General Burnside issued order No. 81, requiring all baggage and part of ammunition trains destroyed, in order to facilitate movements of artillery, etc. The regiment lost all books and papers. Having destroyed trains, retired at 3 o'clock A. M., in direction of Knoxville. Engaged the enemy at Campbell's Station, 11 A. M., November 16. Engagement lasted till night. Arrived at Knoxville, November 18. Engaged enemy at Danbridge, December 21. Returned to Knoxville, by order of General Schofield, where it remained until April.

Broke camp at Massey Creek, Tenn., April 27, and moved to join Sherman's Army. Arrived at Calhoun, Tenn., April 30 and remained until May 3. Moved to Red Clay, Ga., and, on 5th, to vicinity of Rocky Face Ridge. Engaged enemy on 8th May. Moved, on 9th, for Resaca, via Snake Creek Gap. Engaged at Resaca, 14th and 15th May. Moved with command, from Resaca to Dallas. Regiment, while on picket, May 28, was attacked by the enemy, in force, and, before re-inforcements came up, lost a number of its men. June 18, while engaged near Kenesaw Mountain, Captain Ed. Camp, Company H, while on the skirmish line, was instantly killed. Regiment participated in all engagements around Kenesaw Mountain, and the subsequent fighting around Atlanta. Followed the enemy to Lovejoy Station, and withdrew on night of September 4, 1864, arriving at Decatur, Ga., September 6, 1864.

Left Decatur, September 28, in pursuit of Hood's Army, passing over old lines, around Dallas and Kenesaw Mountain, to Resaca. Thence to Rome, Ga. Thence, on 18th October, to Cedar Bluffs, Ala. Returned to Resaca, where remained until November 6th, 1864. Moved by rail, to Nashville, Tenn., and from thence to Johnsonville.

November 18, Regiment, with Division, proceeded, via Nashville, to Columbia, Tenn., where on 22d November, met the advance of Hood's Army. Skirmished with enemy until 28th, when finding enemy crossing Duck River, fell back to Franklin. Regiment engaged the enemy at Spring Hill, November 28 with small loss.

November 29, assigned position in the lines near Columbia pike, and owing to lateness of arriving, had not breastworks complete when the battle commenced. Regiment suffered a severe loss in the death of Colonel Lowry, who fell, mortally wounded, from a minnie ball in head. First Lieutenant Isaac C. Morse, commanding Company A, was also killed. After fall of Colonel Lowry, the command of the Regiment devolved upon Captain McGraw, (Major Milholand being on staff duty.)

Arrived at Nashville, December 1. During battle of Franklin, the Regiment captured two stands of enemy's colors, and had its own colors seized, but they were recovered by Private Walker, of Company G, who killed the enemy seizing them.

December 1, 1864. Regiment went into position, with Division, near Fort Negley, Nashville. It drew new arms, and was fully clothed and equipped. Remained, doing picket duty, and skirmishing, until December 15, when broke camp, and attacked enemy at 11 A. M. At 3 P. M. charged enemy's lines, with success. Capt. S. S. Williams, Company K, was wounded. The enemy being completely routed, Regiment encamped near Brentwood Hills, on night of 16th. Next morning, moved towards Franklin, in pursuit of retreating enemy. Arrived at Columbia, December 20. January 2, 1865, left Columbia for Clinton, Tenn. Remained in camp until January 26, when embarked on board transports, bound for Washington, D. C., and arrived February 2. Moved to Alexandria, Va., February 9.

February 11, embarked on steamer for Fort Fisher, N. C. Arrived off the fort on 15th. Passed New Inlet on 17th, and landed at Smithville. Moved for Fort Anderson. Moved on enemy's pickets at 7 A. M., 18th. Drove in his skirmishers, with but little difficulty. Entrenched in a semi-circle around fort, one-half mile in rear. The enemy shelling furiously, 6 men were wounded. Held the position during the day, and attacked fort at daylight, on morning of 20th, and found it evacuated, excepting 52 men, taken prisoners. Regiment took fort's colors. Followed retreating enemy to Brunswick River, opposite Wilmington. Crossed Cape Fear River, on morning of 22d. Remained at Wilmington two weeks, doing guard and picket duty. Arrived at New River, March 8. Arrived at Kingston, on 14th, and remained until 19th, when moved forward again for Goldsboro, arriving there on evening of the 21st, and meeting advance of General Sherman's Army.

Remained at Goldsboro until April 10, awaiting clothing and supplies for Sherman's Army.

Remained at Raleigh until surrender of Johnson. After surrender, Regiment, with Division, went to Salisbury, N. C., where it remained doing guard duty, until June 21, 1865, when mustered out of service. June 22, left for Camp Butler, Ill., where it arrived July 2, 1865, and received final payment and discharge.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Eighth Regiment, Illinois Volunteers, was organized at Peoria, Ill., by Colonel John Warner, and mustered into the United States service on the 28th day of August, 1862.

The Regiment remained in camp at Peoria until the 6th of October, when it proceeded by rail to Covington, Ky., on its arrival there, reporting to Major General Gordon Granger, and was assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division, Army of Kentucky, commanded respectively by Colonel John Coburn, Thirty-third Indiana Volunteers, Brigadier General A. Baird, and Major General Gordon Granger.

The Regiment was here fully equipped for active field service, and on the 17th of October, marched with its Division, passing through Falmouth, Cynthiana, Paris and Lexington, to Nicholasville, Ky., where it went into camp on the 1st of November, 1862.

The army being here reorganized, the One Hundred and Eighth was assigned to the Second Brigade, First Division, commanded respectively by Colonel William J. Landrum, of the Nineteenth Kentucky Infantry, and Brigadier General A. J. Smith.

November 14th, 1862, broke camp at Nicholasville, and marched with the Division, passing through Versailles, Frankfort and Shelbyville to Louisville, Ky., where it arrived on the 19th November, and on the 21st embarked on board of transports for Memphis, Tenn. Arrived at Memphis November 26th, and went into camp near the city.

Here the troops were again re-organized, and the One Hundred and Eighth was assigned to the First Division, Right wing, Army of the Tennessee, Colonel Landrum and General A. J. Smith commanding the Brigade and Division respectively. The Regiment remained at Memphis performing picket and other guard duty until December 20th, 1862, when it embarked on board the steamer "City of Alton," and proceeded with the expedition under General W. T. Sherman against Vicksburg. The expedition proceeded down the Mississippi to the mouth of the Yazoo River, and up the latter to a place called Johnson's Landing, where it arrived on the evening of December 28th.

On the morning of the 29th, the Regiment disembarked and formed in line of battle; found the enemy strongly fortified on the bluffs running northeast from the City of Vicksburg.

The One Hundred and Eighth occupied the extreme right of the Union line, its right resting on the Mississippi River. The Regiment opened fire on the enemy's pickets on the afternoon of the 29th, and sharp skirmishing was kept up until dark, when it received orders to fall back a distance of 300 yards and hold its position.

It remained under arms during the night, and the rain came down in torrents. Early on the morning of the 30th, it received orders to advance, retake and hold its position of the previous day. In carrying out of this order, there was some pretty lively skirmishing which continued for about a half hour and resulted in the enemy being driven back with a loss to him of 7 killed and 4 prisoners in front of the One Hundred and Eighth's line. The orders were to retake and hold its position of the day before, and having done this, no attempt was made to do more, and about noon the Regiment was relieved and allowed to fall back to rest and refresh itself.

January 1st, 1863, the One Hundred and Eighth was again ordered to the front, where it remained on the skirmish line until near midnight, when, in compliance with orders received early in the evening, it silently withdrew, and with a section of the Chicago Mercantile Battery, covered the retreat of the entire army; arrived at Johnson's Landing about daylight on the morning of the 2nd, and re-embarked on board the steamer "City of Alton." The withdrawal of our forces was so well arranged and conducted that the enemy was not aware of our departure until they saw our fleet of transports steaming down the Yazoo River. The One Hundred and Eighth was highly complimented by the General commanding for its part in this affair.

The expedition proceeded down the Yazoo to the Mississippi, up that river to the mouth of White, up the latter and through a cut-off, into the Arkansas to Arkansas Post, or as it is sometimes called, Fort Hindman, when, on the afternoon of January 10th, 1863, the One Hundred and Eighth disembarked and took an active part in the investment of that fort. On the following morning, January 11th, the Regiment was ordered to advance through a narrow strip of timber and across an open field within short range of the enemy's guns, to within pistol shot of the fort.

The fighting immediately opened at this point, and was very severe. From the moment that the order to advance was given, the officers and men, without exception, displayed a coolness and courage which, taking into consideration the fact of its being the first time that the Regiment was under a heavy fire, was greatly to their credit. The casualties in the One Hundred and Eighth on this occasion were 13 men wounded, none mortally.

Immediately after the capture of Fort Hindman, to-wit: on the 15th of January, 1863, the Regiment embarked and proceeded down the river to Young's Point, La., nearly opposite to Vicksburg, where, on the 24th of January, 1863, it disembarked and went into camp.

Owing to its long confinement on board of transports, the want of pure air and sanitary conveniences during this expedition, great mortality prevailed. First Lieutenant Philo W. Hill, Company A, and 134 enlisted men died of disease during the months of February and March, 1863.

Major General John A. McClernand arrived and took command of the expedition just previous to the engagement at Fort Hindman, and the title of the army was then changed to the Army of the Mississippi, the Brigade and Division organizations remaining the same as before, and the Division was designated the Tenth Division of the Thirteenth Army Corps.

Here it remained on outpost duty and furnishing heavy details to work on the famous "canal," up to the 10th of March, 1863, when it embarked on board of the steamer "Spread Eagle," and proceeded to Milliken's Bend, La. Disembarked and went into camp. Remained at this point until the 15th of April, 1863, when it broke camp and marched with the Division and Corps via Richmond, Smith's Plantation and Lake St. Joe to Hard Times Landing, on the Mississippi River, nearly opposite to Grand Gulf; thence to Bruinsburg, arriving there on the night of the 29th of April, 1863.

April 30th, in the afternoon, crossed over the Mississippi River on the ironclad gunboat "LaFayette," which had run by the rebel batteries at Vicksburg and Grand Gulf.

May 1, 1863, at 1 o'clock A. M., the Regiment was on the march, and after a rapid march, at about 8 o'clock A. M., reached the battlefield of Port Gibson, or, as it is sometimes called Magnolia Ridge, Miss. Fighting had begun a little before the One Hundred and Eighth arrived on the field, and there was no time given for rest; the Regiment immediately moved into position. The manœuvring, marching and counter-marching over steep and rugged hills and across deep ravines, which continued during the entire day until nearly sunset, was very fatiguing, the day being excessively hot, but the result was a grand victory for the Union forces.

After a very circuitous march, the Regiment reached Champion Hills on the 10th of May, where the enemy were again met and beautifully whipped. The One Hundred and Eighth bore a conspicuous part in this bloody battle, and was highly praised for its valor by its commanders. Here the Regiment was detached for the duty of guarding our prisoners of war.

May 17th, marched its prisoners to Black River Bridge, where it was joined by the Twenty-third Iowa Infantry, who also had in charge a large number of prisoners. The number of prisoners then in charge of both Regiments was about 4,500.

On the night of May 19th, reached the landing at Haines' Bluff, on the Yazoo River, and, on the 20th, embarked with a portion of the prisoners on board the Steamer, "Fanny Bulitt," proceeded to Young's Point, La., where it disembarked and went into camp on the same ground it occupied some five months previous.

May 25th, embarked with its prisoners on board the steamer "Gladiator," and proceeded to Memphis, Tenn., where it turned over its prisoners to the commandant of that post, and returned to Young's Point on the steamer "Emerald." On its passage down, the steamer was fired into a number of times by guerillas from the shore, but the only casualties in the Regiment was one man of Company K severely wounded in the leg.

The regiment now remained at Young's Point, La., in the performance of various kinds of duty, until after the surrender of Vicksburg. It kept up a line of pickets across the point of land opposite the city of Vicksburg, which, together with the gunboats stationed above and below the city, formed with the lines on the east side of the river a complete circuit around Vicksburg.

The One Hundred and Eighth furnished heavy details of men to man and work the heavy mortars upon the mortar boats above the city, and a number of the men so detailed were permanently disabled by the concussion of the discharge of the mortars.

July 18th the Regiment crossed over to Vicksburg, and reported to Major General McPherson, commanding the Seventeenth Army Corps, and went into camp.

July 26th, the One Hundred and Eighth embarked and proceeded to Memphis, Tenn., where it arrived on the 29th, and reported to Major General Hurlburt.

On the 5th of August, it left Memphis, and proceeded by rail to LaGrange, Tenn., and upon its arrival there, was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Corps.

Oct. 28th, marched to Pocahontas, Tenn., and garrisoned that post until the 9th of November, when it proceeded by rail to Corinth, Miss. Remained at Corinth until the 25th of January, 1864, when it proceeded by rail to Memphis, Tenn. Here the regiment was assigned to the Second Brigade, District of Memphis, Sixteenth Army Corps.

June 2d, 1864, a detachment of about 130 men and officers of the One Hundred and Eighth, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel R. L. Sidwell, marched with the expedition under Brigadier General Sturgis, which left Memphis at that time to meet the enemy under General Forrest. For the first nine days that the expedition was out, it rained nearly every day: the condition of the roads was bad, and the troops suffered in many ways.

On the 10th of June the advance came up with the enemy at Brice's Cross-roads or Guntown, Miss., and immediately engaged them: the day was excessively hot, not a cloud appeared in the sky, and the sun's rays came beating down a road moist from previous rains, causing a steam to rise that was almost suffocating. Under this condition of things, as soon as the first gun was heard in the front, the troops were hurried forward on the double quick, and upon arrival at the scene of action, were hastily marched to the field, and assigned their position in line without a moment's time to rest after a long and tiresome march, the last two miles of which was made on the double quick. The One Hundred and Eighth has cause to feel proud of its record on this occasion, for notwithstanding that our forces were defeated, owing to the treachery or incompetency on the part of some one, the One Hundred and Eighth did its part bravely and well, and were the last to leave the field, and then not until it had expended its last cartridge, and found it impossible to obtain a fresh supply.

Colonel Sidwell in his report to the Brigade commander gave the casualties in the One Hundred and Eighth as 2 enlisted men killed, 1 officer and 4 enlisted men wounded, and 10 officers and 97 men missing. A number of those reported as "missing" came up afterwards. Captain Henry C. Sommers, of Company G, was captured and murdered by guerillas on this expedition, and the leader of the gang, one Dick Davis, was afterwards captured, tried for the crime and hanged at Memphis.

On the occasion of Forrest's raid into Memphis August 21, 1864, the One Hundred and Eighth did good service in causing him to make a hasty retreat.

On the 28th of February, 1865, the Regiment broke camp at Memphis and embarked for New Orleans, La., where, upon its arrival it was assigned to the Third Brigade, Third Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, its Colonel, Charles Turner, having command of the Brigade.

March 12, embarked on board the ocean steamer "Guiding Star" for Fort Gaines, on Dauphine Island, arriving on the 16th, disembarked; here Colonel Geddis, Eighth Iowa Infantry, relieved Colonel Turner of command of the Brigade, being the senior officer, and the latter resumed command of his Regiment.

March 21, embarked and moved up Mobile Bay and Fish River to Danley's Mills, about twenty-five miles from the mouth of Fish River, disembarked and bivouacked until the morning of the 25th, when it marched with the Corps in the direction of Mobile.

Early on the morning of the 27th, met the enemy and drove him within his works at Spanish Fort, the strongest of Mobile's defenses.

Heavy fighting was kept up all day, and during the night siege works were begun. The One Hundred and Eighth occupied the extreme right of the Union line, which was a most important position, for it was expected that the enemy would attempt to turn this flank.

The regiment pushed its works to within one hundred yards of the enemy, the men working night and day, and constantly exposed to the fire of the enemy's sharp-shooters. The siege of this stronghold lasted thirteen days, and was brought to a close on the night of the 8th of April, when the Third Brigade, of which the One Hundred and Eighth was part, charged the enemy's works from the works constructed by the One Hundred and Eighth, which were two hundred yards nearer the enemy's works than any other part of our line. The casualties in the One Hundred and Eighth during the siege and assault were, considering their exposed position, extremely light—being 3 enlisted men killed, and 1 officer, Captain W. M. Bullock, of Company E, and 10 enlisted men wounded, the first named, severely.

On the 9th of April, 1865, marched with the Corps in the direction of Montgomery, Ala., where it arrived on the 25th of the same month. Here it remained performing provost duty until the 18th of July, when it broke camp and embarked on steamer for Selma, Ala.; moved thence by rail to Jackson, Miss., via Demopolis and Meridian. From Jackson the Regiment marched to Black River and proceeded thence by rail to Vicksburg.

On the 5th day of August, 1865, the final muster-out rolls were signed by the mustering officer, and the Regiment embarked for Cairo, Ill.; from thence it proceeded by rail to Chicago, where, on the 11th of August, 1865, it was paid and finally discharged from the service of the United States.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND NINTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Ninth Infantry was recruited chiefly of residents of Union county except Company K, which was from Pulaski county. The Regiment was mustered into the United States service September 11, 1862, at which time it was armed with a very inferior gun.

The Regiment remained in camp drilling until the 20th of October, when it was ordered to Cairo; thence it moved to Columbus, Ky., where the companies were separated and assigned to guard duty for two or three weeks, when the Regiment was moved to Bolivar, Tenn., and reported to General Brayman; remained there about two weeks drilling and performing guard duty; was next moved to Moscow, Tenn., and reported to General Quinby; remained there one week; was moved thence in the direction of Holly Springs, with Quinby's Division; at Lumpkin's Mill the Regiment was detached and left there on account of the bad condition of their guns, which were deemed unfit for use in battle. Subsequently the Regiment was moved back to Holly Springs to guard railroad bridges between there and Waterford, a distance of about 10 miles.

On the 1st day of January, 1863, the Regiment moved into Holly Springs and reported to General Grant. Soon afterward it was moved to Memphis, where it remained until the last of March performing guard duty; thence it moved to Lake Providence, arriving there April 1. By this time the Regiment was greatly reduced in numbers and because of this it was consolidated with the Eleventh Infantry, where the further history of the service of the men composing the One Hundred and Ninth Infantry may be found.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Tenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry was organized at Anna, Ill., by Colonel Thomas S. Casey in September, A. D. 1862, and was mustered into the United States service September 11, 1862, by Captain Washington, of the Sixteenth Regular Infantry.

The Regiment was recruited from the counties of Jefferson, Washington, Wayne, Hamilton, Saline, Franklin, Perry and Williamson.

On the 23d day of September, A. D. 1862, the Regiment was ordered to Louisville, Ky., and there was assigned to the Nineteenth Brigade, comprised of the Forty-first Ohio, Ninth Indiana, Sixth and Twenty-seventh Kentucky Regiments, and commanded by Col. W. B. Hazen. The Brigade formed a part of the Fourth Division, General William Sooy Smith commanding, Army of Ohio.

September 27th, 1862, left Louisville in pursuit of the Rebel General Bragg, who had followed General Buell from Nashville, Tenn., to Salt River, about forty miles from Louisville. The march was by the way of Bardstown to Perryville, when the Regiment with the Brigade was in line of battle by noon on the 8th of October, 1862, and not more than two miles distant from where the battle of Perryville was being fought. An advance was not ordered. The Regiment lay in line of battle during the night and advanced in that order in the morning only to find that during the night Bragg had retreated and escaped.

On the 11th day of October the Brigade encountered the enemy a mile in front of Danville. A line of battle was formed and the rebels were driven through and beyond the town of Danville. This was the first skirmish that the Regiment was engaged in. The Regiment remained near Danville until the 14th of October, and on that day moved toward Crab Orchard in pursuit of the enemy.

On the 16th of October, not far from Mt. Vernon, Ky., the rear of the enemy was encountered drawn up in line of battle. The Nineteenth Brigade advanced in line of battle, and after sharp skirmishing the rebels were driven from their position and retreated.

On the 15th and 16th of October the Regiment was constantly skirmishing. On the night of the 16th the camp was at Big Rock Castle Creek. On the 17th moved to Wild Cat. On the 18th and 19th encamped at Petman's Cross roads, within forty-five miles of Cumberland Gap. From there the Regiment returned to Camp Wild Cat. From there the Regiment moved by the way of Somerset, Columbia, Glasgow and Gallatin to Nashville, Tenn., where it encamped on the 7th day of November, 1862.

Of the campaign in Southeastern Kentucky, the Brigade Commander, Colonel, (now Brigade General) Hazen, in his report said: "It is proper to remark that during the entire campaign, although we were destitute of many of the comforts usual in campaigns, without tents, often without sufficient food, through the most inclement weather, marches of almost unprecedented length, I have never heard a murmur, and have now to report a condition of health better than ever before known in the Brigade, and a state of thorough discipline in the highest degree satisfactory."

On the 26th of December, the Regiment marched toward Murfreesboro. At Lavergne, the Regiment came up with the rebels, and a considerable skirmish ensued. The Twenty-seventh marched on the Jefferson pike and crossed Stewart Creek.

On the 29th of December the Regiment was within three miles of Murfreesboro, and on the 30th in line of battle.

On the 31st engaged in the battle of Stone River. In that battle the Regiment lost in killed and wounded very heavily, Lieutenant Jesse G. Payne, of Company D, a valiant and brave officer, being among the killed.

The battle ground of the Regiment was exactly where the monument to "Hazen's Brigade" now stands. On the night of the 31st the Regiment slept where it had fought during the day in the extreme advance until the early dawn of the first day in January, when it took a position on the bank of Stone River.

Of the conduct of the Regiment in the battle of Stone River the Brigade Commander said: "It displayed that fearless courage one admires in veterans." Of this brigade he said: "Such heroic service rendered their country this day, such heroic and daring valor justly entitles these men to the profound respect of the people and the country."

After the battle of Stone River the Regiment, with the remainder of the Brigade, was posted at Readyville, ten miles from Murfreesboro, on the extreme left of the army.

On the 2d day of April, breaking camp at 11 P. M., the Regiment participated in the attack on the rebels at Woodbury, and in this expedition at daylight on the 3d of April, captured one picket post consisting of thirty mounted rebels with their horses. One of the rebels captured was a brother of one of the assistant surgeons of the Regiment. He was a mere boy, 17 years old, who after being properly advised was sent back to his aged mother, who lived in the immediate neighborhood.

In May, 1863, the Regiment being much reduced because of losses in battles, sickness and discharges, was consolidated. After that the Regiment was engaged in the battles of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, the battles around Atlanta, and in the "March to the Sea," then in the march north through the Carolina's, and was at the surrender of General Johnston's Army. Marched from there to Washington City, participated in the Grand Review of General Sherman's Army, and was there, on the 5th day of June, 1865, mustered out of the service. From there the Regiment was moved by rail to Chicago, Ill., where on the 15th day of June it received final payment and discharge.

ORDER OF CONSOLIDATION.

The consolidation of this Regiment was ordered by Paragraph 6, Special Field Orders 124, Headquarters Department of the Cumberland, May 7, 1863, and approved by Major General John M. Palmer, which order is as follows:

"Major General Palmer, commanding Second Division, Twenty-first Army Corps, will cause the consolidation of the One Hundred and Tenth Regiment Illinois Volunteers, under the instructions contained in General Orders, No. 86, War Department, current series. The officers to be retained in service will be selected by him. The Assistant Commissary of Musters, Second Division, Twenty-first Army Corps, will muster out of service all officers rendered supernumerary by the consolidation.

A report of the battalion as re-organized will be made to these Headquarters.

By command of Major General ROSECRANS.

H. THRALL,
Captain and A. A. G.

May 8, 1863—Consolidations made, by reducing the Regiment to four (4) Companies.

HEADQUARTERS FOURTEENTH ARMY CORPS, ARMY OF GEORGIA,

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND ELEVENTH INFANTRY.

This Regiment was organized by Colonel James S. Martin, under call of the President, in June, 1862, and was mustered into the service of the United States at Salem, September 18, 1862. The strength of the Regiment at date of muster was 886 officers and enlisted men. Six of the companies comprising this Regiment were raised in Marion county, one in Clay, one in Washington, one in Clinton, and one company composed of men from Wayne and Marion counties, thus making the Regiment a home organization.

By special order No. 211, August 16, 1862, Salem was designated as the place of rendezvous; said order also gave the Regiment its numerical designation. Our camp at Salem was given the name of Camp Marshall, in honor of B. F. Marshall, of Salem, who took an active part in the organization of the Regiment, and who was afterwards appointed Quartermaster of the same.

The Regiment remained at Camp Marshall until the 31st of October, and on that day numbered 930 officers and men. Having received orders to report to Brigadier General Tuttle, commanding at Cairo, in obedience to the same the Regiment broke camp on the morning of the 31st, and marched three miles across the country to Tonti Station, on the Illinois Central Railroad, thence by rail to Cairo, where we arrived at 6 P. M.; reported to General Tuttle, and went into camp on the levee in front of the city. On the following morning we embarked on transports for Columbus, Ky., where we arrived at 2 P. M., and reported to Brigadier General Davies, commanding, and went into camp on the bank of the river, awaiting transportation to the front. On November 2 we received orders from General Davies assigning us to duty as part of garrison of the post of Columbus. Every effort to have this order countermanded having failed, a camp site was selected on the bluff overlooking the town and river, the erection of winter quarters commenced, which, together with the drill and garrison duty, made up the duties of each day.

January 12, by order of Brigadier General Alboth, commanding, Colonel Martin assumed command of the post, and Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Black of the Regiment.

March 12, by order of General Alboth, the Regiment, under command of Colonel Black, embarked for Fort Heiman, Ky., and arrived at the fort on the evening of the 13th, and went into camp as a garrison for the same. The Regiment remained at Fort Heiman until May 28, when orders were received to report to Colonel Martin, who was then commanding the post of Paducah, Ky. The Regiment moved to Paducah. While stationed at Fort Heiman the Regiment made frequent raids into the country, capturing a large amount of rebel property and a number of prisoners.

The Regiment remained at the post of Paducah, doing garrison duty, until the 31st day of October, when, by order of General Sherman, Colonel Martin was relieved from duty as commander of the post, and ordered to report to him, with his Regiment, at Florence, Ala.

November 2. embarked on boats, moved up the Tennessee River and landed at East Port, Miss.; on the morning of the 5th, disembarked and took up the line of march for Florence. While on this march received orders from General Dodge, commanding left wing Sixteenth Army Corps, to go into camp at Gravel Springs, fifteen miles out, and await the arrival of his command, with information that General Sherman had broken camp at Florence, and was marching three days in advance. On this day's march we lost in a skirmish with the enemy two wounded and five missing.

November 7, by order of General Dodge, the Regiment was temporarily assigned to the Second Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, with orders to report to Colonel Mercy, commanding brigades, and move with the same. Took up line of march, arriving at Pulaski, Tenn., on the 12th, and went into winter quarters with the command February 23, 1864. The Regiment received orders to march to Decatur Junction, Ala., go into camp and await orders. Went into camp on the evening of the 27th. Found the enemy occupying the town on the opposite side of the river. March 7 marched to a point on the river some six miles above Decatur, and under cover of night floated down the river in pontoon boats, and captured the town.

March 16th received orders to report to Major General John A. Logan, commanding Fifteenth Corps, at Huntsville, Ala. Reported to General Logan on the 18th, and went into camp at Huntsville. On the 19th received orders assigning the Regiment to First Brigade, Second Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, with orders to report to Brigadier General Smith, commanding Second Division, at Larkinsville, Ala., for duty. Reported to General Smith, and went into camp at Larkinsville on the 20th, where we remained, doing garrison duty, until May 1, 1864, when our Division broke camp and started on the Atlanta campaign. Our command moved via Bridgeport, crossing the Tennessee River at this point, crossed Look-out Mountain, and made a halt at Rossville on the 6th, with orders to turn over our tents and all extra baggage to the Quartermaster assigned to receive them and receipt for the same. We resumed the march with pack mules, tent flies and dog tents—but we had learned the inexorable laws that govern military life—obey orders—and there is not a murmur at the loss of anything looking to the comforts of camp life.

We cross Taylor's Ridge, pass Gordon's Springs, and enter Snake Creek Gap, skirmishing with the enemy as we advance. May the 9th we pass through the Gap, and go into camp at the cross roads near the railroad, and in the rear of the rebel army.

May 10th the Regiment was in line of battle all day, with heavy skirmishing in our front, in which a part of the Regiment took part. During the night we broke camp and moved back into the Gap.

May 12th the Army of the Tennessee moved out of Snake Creep Gap, and formed line of battle at cross roads.

May 13th and 15th the Army Corps was formed in line of battle, and advanced to gain possession of a ridge overlooking the town of Resaca. After gaining the ridge the Regiment was ordered to advance and secure possession of a small stream at the foot of the same. In this little battle the Regiment lost seven killed and eight wounded. This being our first fight of any magnitude, the Regiment was complimented by Brigade and Division Commanders for their good behaviour under fire.

May 14th heavy fighting was heard to our left, and a portion of the rebel troops in our front were discovered moving in that direction. To check this move the Regiment received orders to charge the enemy's line, and drive them from a small stream in our immediate front. We drove them from the stream and got possession of a hill beyond, and held the same until reinforced. The Corps was advancing during the night to cover our position. Our loss in this fight was seven killed and twenty-eight wounded. Lieutenant Stover, of Company G, was among the killed. The Regiment was complimented by General Logan, Corps Commander.

May 16th crossed the Ostanola River in pursuit of Johnson's retreating army; 17th resumed the march, moving via Adairsville and Rome; went into camp near Kingston, where we remained until the morning of the 23d, when we again broke camp and moved on the Dallas road.

May 25th we struck the enemy near Dallas, and skirmished all day, with our Regiment in advance. The enemy fell back, and we marched into the town. Here our Brigade came near being surrounded and probably captured. The enemy, after leaving the town, fell back without further resistance, the Brigade following, moving by the flanks, and when about two miles from town, we ran into the main line of the rebel army, and were.

attacked on the right, left and front. Line of battle was formed under heavy fire, and our position held until reinforcements came to our relief. We felt our position to be a precarious one.

Our part of the army seemed to be in confusion. Sherman says in his Memoirs: "The convergence of our columns towards Dallas produced much confusion. I am sure similar confusion existed in the army opposed to us, for we were all mixed up." We thought we were badly mixed.

May 27th skirmished all day, feeling the enemy, and completing our work. May 28th an attempt was made to withdraw from our position, when our Corps were charged by the enemy, the heaviest forces striking our Division. They seemed determined to break our line, and advance with fixed bayonets to our very works, but we repulsed and drove them back with heavy loss. The Regiment lost in this engagement five killed and fifteen wounded. Among the latter was Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Black. We felt heavily the temporary loss of this brave officer and true soldier.

June 1st, we were withdrawn from our position at daybreak, moved to the left and went into camp at New Hope Church. June 5th, we again break camp and move to the left and pitch our tents at Ackworth on the railroad. June 10th, we moved to the front and went into camp at Big Shanty. 13th we were ordered to the left in support of the Fourth Division, who assaulted the enemy's works and captured a large number of prisoners. June 15th, we were in line of battle all day with heavy fighting in our front. 16th we were ordered to the support of Osterhaus with information that the enemy were massing in his front. 19th we advanced and took a position at the base of Kenesaw Mountain. 24th the Regiment was ordered to advance their line up the side of the mountain. After a hotly contested little fight we forced the enemy back and took a new position with a loss of 2 killed and 2 wounded. 26th, the Regiment received orders to be ready to move at dark. Our Division being relieved by a Division of the Sixteenth Corps, we moved three miles to the right and went into camp and slept on our arms with orders to be in readiness by eight o'clock in the morning for an assault on Little Kenesaw Mountain. We formed line of battle at the hour named, moved forward, drove in the enemy's pickets and charged the works which were located well up the side of the mountain; we advanced to the abatis in front of the enemy's line and held this position for nearly an hour under heavy fire. We found the works impregnable and under orders fell back and took up a position on a ridge facing Kenesaw. Our loss was 1 killed and 16 wounded.

Captain J. V. Andrews, of Company A, was killed, and Captain W. H. Walker, of Company B, was severely wounded. A portion of General Thomas' command was assaulted at the same time about a mile to our right with the same result. General Sherman in his Memoirs says, "This was the hardest fight of the campaign." July 3d, the Regiment was engaged in a heavy skirmish on the extreme right of the army. July 8th, moved three miles to the left and skirmished all day with the enemy. 12th, we broke camp, Johnson's army having crossed the Chattahoochee River and moved via Marietta and Rossville to Decatur. We were then on the extreme left of the army. July 20th we broke camp and moved in the direction of Atlanta, destroying the railroads in our march. The Regiment had the advance and skirmished all day; we strike the enemy in force about two miles east of Atlanta, form line of battle and hastily construct earthworks. July 22d at early dawn the pickets reported that the enemy had abandoned their works and left our front; we moved forward at 8 o'clock and occupied the same, believing that Hood was evacuating Atlanta. The First and Second Brigade of our Division were each ordered to send a Regiment along the railroad to the front and take positions close up to the fortifications with a view of being the first to enter the city, our Regiment was selected for this honor from the First Brigade, with Major Mabry in command, Colonel Martin being in command of the Brigade. The Regiment advanced to within half or three-quarters of a mile of the enemy's works, selected a favorable position and threw up temporary earth works and was ready to give our flag the honor to be the first to wave over the doomed city. Our hopes, however, were not to be realized. About noon heavy cannonading was heard on the extreme left of the army. We soon heard heavy musketry firing and began to realize that instead of Hood leaving Atlanta he had commenced a great battle; the sound of the conflict grows in volume as it sweeps down the line towards us. At about 4 o'clock Clabourn's Division sallied from their works, formed a line in our front. The Regiment having no orders to fall back prepared to meet the advance; here we think was as bold a stand and as gallant a fight as was ever made by a regiment of men. They were pitted against a Division of the rebel army. We held our position until we were flanked and surrounded when we abandoned our works, cut our way through and fell back on our line. The enemy still advancing charged our main line and drove our Division back in confusion.

The position was rallied by General Logan in person, when we fought for and gained our lost position, driving the enemy back into Atlanta. Martin's Brigade, which was withdrawn from our line and sent to the support of General Dodge on the extreme left, weakened our line and made Clabourn's assault a partial success. The loss of the Regiment in this fight was 20 killed and 45 wounded, and 80 missing. Captain McGuire, Company E, Lieutenant Larimer, Company H, and Lieutenant Shull, Company B, were among the killed. Major Mabry was severely wounded. Sergeant David Kell, color bearer, received seven wounds from musket balls. On the following morning 110 of the enemy's dead were found in front of the position held by the Regiment. Logan's undaunted courage as a soldier and his great ability as an officer to handle and inspire an army in the midst of a great battle won the day and saved the Army of the Tennessee. The Regiment was engaged in the battle of the 28th, fought west of Atlanta, with a loss of 10 wounded and 1 missing. The 30th we had a heavy skirmish in front of our Division trying to advance our lines. August 3 we again skirmished all day. The 26th we returned from our position under cover of night and moved to the right.

August 31 we were engaged in the battle of Jonesboro. The enemy assaulted our works but were repulsed and driven back with great slaughter. Our loss was 1 killed and 7 wounded.

After the battle Hood evacuated Atlanta. Our command moved back toward Atlanta and went into camp at Eastport where we remained until October 4, when we received orders to march in pursuit of Hood who had gotten into our rear and was destroying our railroads; 20th we went into camp on Little River, Ala., six miles west of Galesville; 23d we skirmished with Wheeler's cavalry at Bulls Gap; 29th we broke camp and took up the line of march for Atlanta. November 3 we went into camp at Whitehall, two miles southwest of Atlanta; 15th we broke camp and started on the great march to the sea; we had no knowledge of our line of march. We bade Atlanta adieu with its memory of hard fought battles and desperate struggles and took up the line of march feeling confident in our ability to go where Sherman might lead. December 10 we went into camp two miles east of Savannah, with heavy cannonading in our front. The 13th broke camp with the information that we were marching on Ft. McAllister, located on the Ogeechee River, at the head of Orson Sound. At 2 P. M., our Division invested the fort. Colonel Martin in command of Brigade, and Major Mabry in command of the Regiment. About 4 P. M., the bugle sounded the charge and in less than 20 minutes the fort was ours. We claim for our regimental flag the honor of being the first inside the fort. The commanding officer of the fort surrendered to Colonel Martin, and Captain Castle, of Company H, now has in his possession the garrison flag of the fort. Our loss was 5 killed and 15 wounded. Lieutenant Lewis J. Land, Company B, and Lieutenant G. W. Smith, Company D, were among the killed. Captain John Foster, Company D, severely wounded.

General Sherman took a boat from the opposite side of the river and communicated with the fleet below, and thus ended the March to the Sea. General Sherman, in his Memoirs, speaking of the assault on Ft. McAllister, says: "On the action of the Second Division to-day depends the safety of the whole army and the success of the campaign."

December 17 we broke camp and marched with Brigade to McIntosh Station on Grand Gulf Railway, with orders to destroy 9 miles of the road by burning the ties and twisting the rails. This order was obeyed to the letter. December 21 we were on the return march with orders to report to General Osterhaus, commanding the Fifteenth Corps, and be ready to take part in an assault on the fortifications at Savannah the following morning. We moved forward on quick time, crossed the river and reported as ordered. We received the good news during the night that Hardee had retired and that Savannah was in our possession. January 27 we embarked for Beaufort, S. C. 28th landed, took up the line of march and went into camp at Pocatigo on the 29th.

February 1 we broke camp and started on the Carolina campaign. The Regiment skirmished with the enemy at South Edisto River on the 9th, and North Edisto on the 12th, losing 1 killed and 1 wounded. February 17 after a heavy skirmish we went into camp at Columbia. We witnessed the great fire that destroyed the city. Broke camp on the 20th and bidding adieu to the once beautiful but now desolate city, we resumed the march northward. March 6 we crossed the Pedee River at Cheraw, where we had a skirmish with the enemy. 10th we went into camp at Fayetteville, N. C. 15th we broke camp and took up the line of march. 10th we were engaged in the battle of Bentonville. 23d we pitched our tents near Goldsboro. April 10 we broke camp and took up the line of march for Raleigh. Went into camp at Raleigh on the 13th, and remained at this place until after the surrender of Johnson's army, when we again broke camp and took up the line of march for Washington City via Richmond, Va. We went into camp near Alexandria, Va., April 19.

The Regiment participated in the grand review held May 21, and went into camp near the city. June 7 we were mustered out of the service. January 10 we broke camp and moved by rail to Springfield. Arrived at Camp Butler and went into camp June 15, and remained in camp until the 27th, when we were paid and received our final discharge from the service of the United States. Disbanded and returned to our homes.

The Regiment was engaged in 8 battles and 17 skirmishes. Number killed in battle, 46; wounded, 144; died in prison, 11; died in hospital, 93; discharged for disability, 71. Total loss 365.

The Regiment marched 1,836 miles, was transported by steamers 650 miles, by railroads 1,250 miles.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWELFTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twelfth Regiment Illinois Volunteers was mustered into the service of the United States on the 20th and 22d days of September, 1862, at Peoria, Ill., and was ordered to report to Major General Wright, commanding the Department of the Ohio, at Cincinnati, O. It accordingly moved from Peoria on the 8th day of October, 1862, by rail, and arrived at Cincinnati, O., about midnight, on the 10th day of October, when it was immediately ordered over the Ohio River, to report to Major General Gordon Granger, at Covington, Ky. The Regiment reported to General Granger about 2 o'clock on the morning of the 11th of October, and immediately went to work to prepare for the field. Having been brigaded with the Thirty-third Indiana, Seventy-seventh, Ninety-seventh and One Hundred and Eighth Illinois, under command of Colonel Coburn, of the Thirty-third Indiana, and having obtained transportation and supplies, it marched from Covington, Ky., on the 18th day of October, 1862, for Falmouth, Ky.; but on the 19th day of October it was detached from the Brigade and ordered to guard a large supply-train to Big Eagle, on the Lexington and Covington pike. The Regiment arrived at Big Eagle on the evening of the 21st of October, and, under orders, marched to Georgetown, Ky., on the 23d, and to Lexington, Ky., on the 24th.

It remained in camp at Lexington, Ky., for about five months, performing various duties, but was principally engaged in grand guard and provost duty; although detachments were occasionally sent to the ferries on the Kentucky River, to guard against the approach of the enemy. And at one time, 100 men of the Regiment were mounted and kept on active and severe duty for several weeks; and while thus engaged, aided in driving Cluke's command out of Kentucky.

On the 21st of March, 1863, the Regiment moved for Danville, Ky., arriving there on the evening of the 22d, and at midnight on the 23d, it was ordered back to Dick's River bridge, on the Lexington pike, with orders to guard the bridge and hold the opposite bank of the river, at all hazards. It remained at the bridge until the evening of the 24th, when it fell back to the Kentucky River, at the mouth of Hickman, with the rest of the army, retreating before what was supposed to be a superior force of the enemy.

From the Kentucky River, it marched back to Nicholasville, and from thence moved by way of Camp Dick Robinson, Lancaster and Crab Orchard in the direction of Somerset, Ky., in pursuit of the enemy, by forced marches. But the cavalry and mounted infantry having overtaken and defeated the enemy at Dutton's Hill, near Somerset, and driven him across the Cumberland River, the Regiment having only heard the sound of artillery at a respectful distance, countermarched and moved back to Stanford.

In October, 1862, the Regiment, on its arrival at Lexington, Ky., was brigaded with the Forty-fifth Ohio and the Eighteenth and Twenty-second Michigan, under command of General Green Clay Smith, of Kentucky. He remained in command until in January, 1863, when Colonel Doolittle, of the Eighteenth Michigan, took the command.

At Stanford, the Regiment was again detached from the Brigade, and ordered to Milledgeville, Ky., where it was mounted, and remained in camp until the 26th of April, when, with the new Brigade, consisting of the Forty-fifth Ohio, Thirty-second Kentucky and One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois, under command of Colonel Benjamin P. Runkle, of the Forty-fifth Ohio, it marched for Somerset, Ky.

At Somerset, it joined other troops, under the command of Brigadier General S. P. Carter, of Tennessee, and moved to Monticello, Ky., south of the Cumberland River, and aided in driving a body of rebel troops, under command of General Pegram, from that place, and out of Kentucky into Tennessee. There the Regiment was under fire for the first time, and although it was not severely engaged and suffered no loss, it was complimented by Colonel Woolford for its steadiness, who remarked that he could scarcely believe the Regiment had not before been under fire.

From Monticello, the Regiment returned to Somerset, Ky., where it remained until July, 1863, and where detachments from it were constantly engaged in active and severe duty, scouting up and down the Cumberland River, often at great distances, by night and by day; and in guarding fords and ferries on the Cumberland River. While at Somerset, Ky., 200 picked men from the Regiment, under command of Captain Dunn, of Company D, with similar detachments from other regiments at Somerset, all under command of Major Dow, of the Regiment, joined Colonel Sanders in his celebrated raid over the mountains into East Tennessee. For rapidity of movement, marching over mountains, and swimming rivers, by day and night, and for successful execution, baffling the enemy, doing him a great amount of damage, and, finally, escaping from a vastly superior force, where every mountain gap was supposed to be securely guarded, this raid stands among the most brilliant of the war. It severely tested the courage and endurance of the men and officers who participated in it. The detachment of the One Hundred and Twelfth lost, in this raid, eleven (11) men captured, and five (5) men drowned in swimming Clinch River, at night.

From Somerset, Ky., the Regiment moved back to Danville, Ky., and in the month of July, assisted in driving about fifteen hundred (1,500) rebels, under command of Scott, across the Cumberland. It was four days and nights engaged in the pursuit of Scott, with but little or no rest or sleep, and for more than a 100 miles was skirmishing with the enemy.

After capturing about five hundred (500) prisoners—scattering many others in the woods—and recovering most of the property stolen by these raiders, Scott was finally driven over the Cumberland River and into the mountains, when the Regiment again returned to Danville, Ky., having had one (1) man killed and six (6) wounded in the pursuit, and began the work of preparing for a campaign into East Tennessee.

From Danville, moved to Stanford, and from Stanford to Crab Orchard, from which place, having completed the necessary preparation, the Regiment marched for East Tennessee, with the army under General Burnside, re-brigaded with the First East Tennessee Mounted Infantry, Eighth Michigan Cavalry and Forty-fifth Ohio Mounted Infantry, under command of Colonel Byrd, of the First East Tennessee, on the 21st of August, 1863, and arrived at Kingston, Tenn., on the 1st of September.

The Regiment actively participated in all of the campaigns in East Tennessee, in 1863, and, up to February 4, 1864, sharing in the glory of redeeming that truly loyal people, and in wresting what was regarded as the key to the rebellion from rebel rule. Being always at the front and often at great distance from the main body of the army, it was kept constantly on the alert, and compelled to perform the severest duties, always on short rations.

Its operations in East Tennessee were at Kingston, Post Oak Springs, Athens, Calhoun, Charleston, Cleveland, Sweetwater, Philadelphia, Loudon, Campbell's Station, Knoxville, Bean Station, Blane's Cross Roads, Dandridge, Sevinville, Fair Gardens, Kelley's Ford, Flat Creek Gap, and other places, at many of which it was engaged in numerous skirmishes and battles, and being constantly in the presence of the enemy. At Cleveland, one (1) Captain was killed, several men wounded, and about twenty (20) captured in a skirmish.

At Calhoun, the Regiment, with the Brigade, was driven back by an overpowering force under Wheeler and Forrest, and the One Hundred and Twelfth brought up the rear, and for the manner in which it was done, holding the enemy in check and saving all the stores, it was complimented in an official order. It, however, had 20 men captured and 1 Captain, who were guarding a ford on the Hiawassa, and were cut off. At Philadelphia, it made a handsome charge and drove the enemy from a hill, for which it was cheered by other troops, and Major Dow, commanding, as well as the Regiment, was highly complimented by General Sanders and other officers. In this charge, one man was killed and several wounded.

At Knoxville, the Regiment, with cavalry, and other mounted infantry, was thrown out in front to hold Longstreet in check, while the town was put in a defensible condition, and on the 18th day of November, 1863, behaved most gallantly, and lost about 100 killed and wounded, and about 20 men cut off and captured.

At Bean Station, Dandridge and Flat Creek, the Regiment lost several in each engagement, killed and wounded.

At Kelly's Ford, on the 28th of January, 1864, the Regiment had 19 wounded, including 4 commissioned officers, and 1 man killed.

After the fight at Kelly's Ford, the Regiment moved to Maryville, Tenn., and from there to Knoxville, where it was dismounted, and marched on foot over the mountains to Mt. Sterling, Ky., a distance of about 200 miles. Arrived there on the 23d of February, and remained until the 6th of April, where the Regiment, after having been refitted as mounted infantry, and about ready for the field, was permanently dismounted and moved to Camp Nelson, Ky., by way of Lexington, where, after refitting for the field, as an infantry Regiment, it marched back again over the mountains, into East Tennessee, and arrived at Knoxville on the 3d of May.

From Knoxville, on the 8th day of May, the Regiment moved, by rail, to Cleveland, Tenn., and from thence marched on foot to Tunnel Hill, Ga., in charge of a large ordnance and ambulance train; reported to Major General Schofield, commanding Department of Ohio, and the Twenty-third Army Corps, in the field. The Regiment had been re-brigaded with the One Hundredth Ohio, One Hundred and Fourth Ohio, Eleventh and Sixteenth Kentucky, under command of Colonel James W. Riley, of the One Hundred and Fourth Ohio, and known as the First Brigade, Third Division—under command of Brigadier General Cox—Twenty-third Army Corps.

From this time on, the Regiment participated in the campaign of General Sherman, against Atlanta, and was with the Twenty-third Army Corps in all its movements in that interesting campaign. At Resaca, on the 14th day of May, it was actively engaged, and lost some 50 men killed and wounded—among the latter the Colonel.

At Utoy Creek, on the right of Atlanta, the Regiment, on the 6th of August, 1863, with the Brigade, made an unsuccessful assault on the enemy's works, and lost 71 men killed, wounded and missing. Among the wounded were the Lieutenant Colonel, 3 Captains and 1 Lieutenant. 3 Sergeants and 1 Corporal were killed on the field.

The Regiment was engaged in numerous other battles and skirmishes in this campaign.

On the 8th of August, the Regiment was again re-brigaded with the Sixty-third, One Hundred and Twentieth and One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Indiana and Fifth Tennessee Regiments, under command of Colonel Thomas J. Henderson, of the One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois. The Brigade was known as the Third Brigade, Third Division, Twenty-third Army Corps, and the regiment remained in it until it was mustered out of the service at the end of the war.

On the 31st of August, after having cut loose from Atlanta, and struck for the Macon Railroad—General Cox being anxious to be the first to reach the road—an object it had so long and so severely struggled to accomplish—ordered the One Hundred and Twelfth Illinois, under command of Major Dow, to report to him personally, when the Regiment immediately pushed forward, drove the enemy rapidly back, and successfully reached the Macon Railroad, just in time to cut off three or four long trains, with ordnance, etc., and commenced the work of tearing up the track. From this moment, all felt that the fall of Atlanta was certain. After marching down to Jonesboro, learned of the evacuation of Atlanta, and on to Lovejoy, the Regiment returned with the army and with the Twenty-third Army Corps, went into camp at Decatur, Ga., and to rest, after being for four months marching and fighting, constantly in the presence of the enemy, and under fire almost every hour of the day and night.

Here the Regiment remained, from the 8th of September until the 4th of October, when Hood having recrossed the Chattahoochie, the Regiment and Brigade, with Sherman's Army, moved in pursuit, and marched during the month, by indirect marches, nearly 400 miles, passing through Marietta, Ackworth, Allatoona, Cartersville, Cassville, Kingston, Rome, Calhoun, Resaca, Snake Creek Gap, Villanow, Sommersville, Gaylesville and Cedar Bluff, Ala., and then back again to Rome.

Here, the Regiment, with the Twenty-third Army Corps, was separated from General Sherman, and sent back into East Tennessee, to look after Hood, who was reported to have crossed the Tennessee. It accordingly marched on foot to Dalton, Ga., and from thence by rail moved to Nashville, and to Thompson Station, below Franklin, and from thence marched to Pulaski, Tenn., on foot.

Remained in camp at Pulaski until the 22d of November, when it commenced retreating to Nashville. During the retreat, participated in the battles of Columbia and Franklin, losing some 30 or 40 men killed and wounded.

The Regiment also participated in the battles of Nashville, on the 15th and 16th of December. The battles of Franklin—November 30th—and Nashville, were glorious battles, and virtually terminated the war in the West.

The Regiment, with the Twenty-third Army Corps, having pursued Hood's Army to the Tennessee River, was then ordered to a new field of operations, and proceeded by steamboat down the Tennessee and up the Ohio River to Cincinnati, and from that city, by rail, to Washington City. From Alexandria, it went by the steamship "Atlantic" to Fort Fisher, North Carolina. The Regiment then aided in the reduction of Fort Anderson, in driving the enemy from his works at Town Creek bridge, and finally from Wilmington, which place was occupied on the 22d of February, 1865. From Wilmington, the Regiment marched to Kingston, N. C., passing through a country which left doubt whether it was land or water. From Kingston, moved to Goldsboro, and, with the army, occupied that place. From Goldsboro, moved to Raleigh. At Raleigh, after the surrender of Johnson's Army, moved to Greensboro, N. C., where the Regiment remained until the 20th of June, 1865, when it was mustered out of the service, and ordered to Chicago, Ill. The Regiment arrived at Chicago on the 27th of June; was finally discharged on the 5th day of July, 1865.

The Regiment was always in the Department of the Ohio, and served in the Twenty-third Army Corps, from its organization to the close of the war.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTEENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Thirteenth Regiment left Camp Hancock, near Camp Douglas, Illinois, November 6, 1862, when it was ordered to Memphis, Tennessee, to report to General Sherman.

On its arrival there, it went into camp, and remained till it joined the expedition known as the "Tallahatchie Expedition," General Sherman commanding.

On its return from that expedition it went into camp and remained until 24th December, 1862, when it accompanied General Sherman in his movement against Vicksburg. It was then brigaded as the Second Brigade, Fourth Division—General Morgan L. Smith commanding Division, and Colonel Giles A. Smith commanding Brigade.

Participated in the battle of Chickasaw Bayou. Went from there to Arkansas Post, where the Regiment lost heavily. After the battle, five companies, C, D, F, I and K, were detailed, by order of General Sherman, to guard prisoners of war to the North. These companies were ordered to Springfield, to recruit, as they were much depleted by overwork and the exposure of the trip. When ordered to return to the field every exertion was made by the Colonel commanding, and all intermediate officers, to have them join their comrades in the field, but without avail, until late in the fall of 1864. After these companies left, those remaining went to Young's Point with the army, its Colonel being there appointed Provost Marshal for the Fifteenth Army Corps. (General Sherman,) and holding that position until the army went to Milliken's Bend. The One Hundred and Thirteenth was the last Regiment to leave the ground where it buried so many of its brave comrades in arms.

While lying at Young's Point, Colonel Hoge was ordered, with the balance of his Regiment and Thirteenth United States Infantry, up Black's Bayou, where Admiral Porter, in six or eight of his gunboats, was surrounded by the enemy. After leaving the transport, it had to make a forced march of 25 miles, General Sherman commanding the Brigade, in person, and on foot. The country was of such a nature, that the Regiment had to march a considerable distance over a marsh, single file, on an extemporized bridge (a single plank in width); consequently could take no horses. Came up to the enemy, toward evening, and had a sharp skirmish, driving him back to the timber. The following day, started on its return—the gunboats having been relieved—and reached camp after an absence of ten days.

Remained at Milliken's Bend some two or three weeks, and then started, with General Sherman, on the march to the rear of Vicksburg. Arrived there on the evening of the 18th, and participated in the assault of the 19th and 22d, in which the Regiment lost heavily. Colonel Hoge being wounded, on the peremptory order of the Corps Surgeon, he received leave of absence. Shortly after his departure, the Battalion was detailed on provost duty on Chickasaw Bayou, an exceedingly unhealthy place. The result was, that in a short time, almost every officer and man was on the sick list. Major Clark then got an order to proceed to Springfield, Illinois, and take command of five companies there, where he remained till he joined the Battalion, with his command, in Memphis, Tennessee, late in the fall of 1864.

Shortly after the fall of Vicksburg Companies A, B, E, G, and H, were ordered to Corinth, Mississippi, and, on October 1, 1863, Colonel Hoge was placed in command of that post, and remained in command until the evacuation, which was on the 25th of January, 1864. From there, was ordered to Memphis, and brigaded with the Second Brigade, Post and Defenses of Memphis, Colonel Hoge commanding.

On the 12th of January, 1864, Colonel Hoge was ordered to take command of the following named Regiments and Batteries: Eighty-second Illinois, Ninety-fifth Illinois, One Hundred and Eighth Illinois, One Hundred and Thirteenth Illinois, One Hundred and Twentieth, and Company B, Second Illinois Light Artillery—and join General Sturgis, in his expedition against Forrest.

Was present at the time Forrest made his raid on Memphis.

Shortly thereafter, Colonel Hoge was ordered to take the One Hundred and Thirteenth Illinois, One Hundred and Twentieth Illinois, Sixty-first United States Colored Infantry, and Company G, First Missouri Light Artillery, and proceed up the Tennessee River. Met with a repulse from a large force under Forrest, and returned with the command to Memphis.

On March 23, 1865, Colonel Hoge was appointed Provost Marshal of the District of West Tennessee, and remained in that position till he was mustered out, with his Regiment, June 20, 1865.

The Regiment was then ordered to Chicago, where they received final payment and discharge June 25, 1865.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND FOURTEENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Fourteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry was organized in the months of July and August, and mustered into the United States service at Camp Butler, Ill., September 18, 1862. Companies A and D were from Cass county; Companies B, C, E, G, H and I, from Sangamon county, and Companies F and K, from Menard county. The Regiment left Camp Butler for Memphis, Tenn., November 8, 1862, arriving November 16, and remained there, on picket duty, until November 26. It then started on the Tallahatchie Campaign, being attached to the First Brigade of Brigadier General Lauman's Division. Arrived at College Hill, Miss., December 4, where it remained until December 23d. Then left for Jackson, Tenn., which was threatened by the rebel General Forrest, where it arrived, after two weeks very hard marching, on January 8th, 1863, and remained, doing picket duty, until February 9. It then returned to Memphis, doing guard duty on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad.

On March 17, the Regiment left Memphis, on transports, bound down the river. Ordered to Young's Point, La., where it arrived April 2, and was assigned to the First Brigade, First Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, commanded by Major General W. T. Sherman, and ordered into camp at Duckport, La.

On the 2d of May, the regiment left for the rear of Vicksburg, and, on May 14, was engaged in the battle of Jackson, Miss.—loss, 5 men killed and wounded. Arrived in rear of Vicksburg, May 18, and participated in the siege—loss, 20 men killed and wounded.

On the surrender of Vicksburg, the Regiment was ordered to move against the rebel General Joe Johnson, who retreated to Jackson, Miss.—during the siege of which place the loss of the Regiment, in killed and wounded, was 7 men. Johnson evacuating, it followed him as far as Brandon, and then returned to Camp Sherman, near Vicksburg, and remained there, doing picket duty, until September 3. While in camp there, Colonel Judy resigned, and was succeeded in command by Lieutenant Colonel King.

Was then ordered to Oak Ridge, Miss., and, while doing picket duty there, had several skirmishes with guerrillas. Lieutenant McClure, Company A was killed, and 2 men captured, while on duty. While there the Regiment participated in two scouts. About the 20th of November, left, on transports, for Memphis, and, on the 26th of November, went on provost duty there.

February 5, 1864, Regiment left, on a scout, and engaged the enemy at Wyatt, Miss.—enabling the cavalry, under General W. S. Smith, to cross the Tallahatchie above, at New Albany. Then returned to Memphis, and went again on provost duty.

April 30, went on another scout, under General Sturgis, of a couple of weeks' hard marching. Returned to Memphis, and was put on picket duty.

June 1, went out again, under General Sturgis, engaging the enemy, under Generals Forrest and Lee, at Guntown, Miss. The action commenced early in the afternoon, between the enemy and the advance cavalry. The infantry was immediately hurried forward, at more than double quick, for about 3 miles, and, the day being one of excessive heat, numbers fell from the ranks, from fatigue and sunstroke. Almost completely exhausted the troops were pushed into the fight, and after a severe engagement of 5 or 6 hours the lines were everywhere repulsed, and commenced falling back. The One Hundred and Fourteenth remained as rear guard, assisting in holding the enemy in check, during the whole of the first night's retreat. The Regiment lost, out of 397 men, 205 in killed, wounded and missing. Assistant Surgeon A. S. French was here killed, while nobly performing the duties of his position. Among the wounded were Adjutant Henry L. Vanhoff, Captain J. M. Johnson, Company A, and Lieutenant T. S. Berry, Company D; and Lieutenants E. P. Strickland and J. D. Zeigler, Company B, captured.

Falling back to Memphis, after two weeks' picket duty, left again, under General A. J. Smith, for Tupelo, Mississippi. On July 13th the Brigade to which the Regiment was attached was surprised by the enemy, near Harrisville, Mississippi, and, after a sharp engagement, the rebels were repulsed and driven back—the One Hundred and Fourteenth receiving the thanks of the Brigade commander, on the field, for the gallant and effective charge made by it. On the next morning the fight was renewed, the rebels being repulsed in repeated charges made during the day and the succeeding night. The next day, the object of the expedition having been accomplished, the troops started back to Memphis, and, on going into camp in the evening, were attacked by the rebels, under General Forrest. The Regiment participated in the charge, by which the enemy was driven from the field. Captain Berry, Company D, commanding the Regiment, and Lieutenant Chadsey, commanding Company H, were severely wounded. The Regiment lost, in these engagements, in killed and wounded, forty (40) men.

Returning to Memphis, the Regiment remained there until August, when it went out under General A. J. Smith on another expedition, into Mississippi, Major J. M. McLean commanding (Lieutenant Colonel King being sick); and upon its return to Memphis, was sent, under General Joseph Mower, to report to General Steele, at Duvall's Bluff, Arkansas. Went into camp at Brownsville, Arkansas. Leaving there, after General Price, marched to Cape Girardeau, Missouri, in seventeen days, on ten days' rations; arriving October 6th. It then embarked on transports for Jefferson City, Missouri, and, disembarking, under command of Major McLean, (Lieutenant Colonel King being left sick at St. Louis), was transported by rail, to Otterville. Then continued the pursuit, by long and tedious marches, to Kansas City; at which point was ordered to St. Louis. Arrived there November 15th. The regiment was then ordered to Nashville, Tennessee, and was engaged in the battles of the 15th and 16th of December, making several charges during the engagements. The One Hundred and Fourteenth was attached to McMillan's Brigade, McArthur's Division, of General A. J. Smith's Corps, which Brigade was specially complimented in General Thomas' report to the War Department for charging and capturing the salient point of the enemy's line. In making this charge a rebel battery was captured, which Captain John M. Johnson, with a few men of the Regiment, and some involuntary assistance compelled from some captured rebels, immediately brought to bear upon the retreating ranks of the enemy, aiding materially in their disorder and capture. The loss of the Regiment was 15 men, in killed and wounded—Captain J. M. Johnson, Company A, commanding Regiment, being slightly wounded. The Regiment was engaged in the pursuit of Hood's forces as far as Pulaski, Tennessee. Then went, by transport, from Clifton, Tennessee, to Eastport, Mississippi, and was there detached as pontooniars of Sixteenth Army Corps. Left Eastport on transports, February 9th, 1865, for New Orleans, Louisiana, arriving there February 22d. On March 23, embarked on steamer, at Lake Pontchartrain, for Spanish Fort, Alabama, and was engaged during the siege of Spanish Fort.

Lieutenant Colonel King, having resigned, and Major McLean having died, Captain S. N. Shoup, Company E, here received a commission as Lieutenant Colonel, and, Captain J. M. Johnson, Company A, as Major.

On the night of the 13th of April, the Regiment was ordered to attack Forts Tracy and Huger, situated in Mobile Bay. The movement was made in pontoon boats, and on arriving at the forts, they were found to have been just evacuated.

After the surrender of Mobile, the Regiment marched to Montgomery, Alabama, arriving April 24th, and bridging the Alabama River with pontoons, remained on duty at the bridge until July 17th, when it was ordered to Vicksburg, Mississippi, for muster-out.

The Regiment was mustered out of the United States' service August 3d, 1865. Arrived at Camp Butler, Illinois, August 7th, and received final payment and discharge August 15th, 1865.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTEENTH INFANTRY.

This regiment was part of Illinois' response to President Lincoln's calls for 600,000 men in the Summer of 1862, and was made up of the sturdy farmers, mechanics, clerks, and school teachers of Macon, Shelby, Christian, Wabash, Sangamon, Morgan, Schuyler, and Tazewell counties. Col. Jesse H. Moore of Decatur, was most prominent in the work of recruiting the regiment, though ably assisted by Lt. Col. Wm. Kinman of Jacksonville, Maj. Geo. A. Poteet of Shelbyville, Capt. F. L. Hays of Decatur, and others. The several companies went into camp rendezvous at Camp Butler about the middle of August. The regiment was organized on August 26th, and was mustered into the service of the United States on the 13th of September, 1862. Having been armed and equipped for the service the regiment was ordered to the field on the 4th of October, and two days later reported to Maj. Gen. H. G. Wright at Cincinnati, and was placed in camp near Covington, Ky., under command of Brig. Gen. A. J. Smith. On October 18th it began its march to Lexington via. Falmouth, Cynthiana, and Paris, arriving at Lexington on the 28th. On the organization of the army of Kentucky the 115th was assigned to the 2nd brigade, composed of the 92nd, 96th and 115th Illinois and the 14th Kentucky, the brigade being commanded, while at Lexington, by Col. P. T. Swayne of the regular army, then colonel of the 99th Ohio, which was a part of the 3rd division, commanded by Brig. Gen. Absalom Baird, Maj. Gen. Gordon Granger commanding the army. On November 13th the regiment started to Richmond, Ky., where it remained until December 20th, Col. Moore being in command of the post. It then marched to Danville, where it joined the remainder of the army of Kentucky, and was in camp there until the latter part of January, 1863. While at Danville it participated in a forced march towards Lebanon for the purpose of checking the operations of the Confederate, John Morgan.

On January 26th it began the march to Louisville with the army of Kentucky and on February 1st embarked on steam transports at Louisville and moved thence via. the Ohio and Cumberland Rivers to Nashville, Tenn., arriving there on the 8th, where it went into camp on the Franklin Pike, three miles South of the city. On March 4th it moved to Franklin under orders to re-enforce Col. Coburn's brigade then in battle at Springhill, and on March 9th and 10th participated in the movement under Gens. Granger and Sheridan against Gen. VanDorn's army as far as Rutherford Creek near Columbia. On returning to Franklin it assisted in fortifying the place and on April 10th took part in the defense against VanDorn's attack, in which the Confederates were repulsed with considerable loss. Up to that time the 115th had suffered no casualties in battle, but by reason of exposure in its marching and scouting expeditions it had lost about 200 men, either dead or permanently disabled. While at Franklin, the army of Kentucky was changed into the Reserve Corps of the Department of the Cumberland, the 115th being assigned to the first brigade with its old associates, the 92nd and 96th Illinois, together with the 40th Ohio and the 84th Indiana, Col. Smith D. Atkins of the 92nd Illinois commanding the brigade which was a part of the 1st division under command of Brig. Gen. A. Baird, the corps being commanded by Maj. Gen. Granger.

On June 2nd the regiment marched to Trinne, Tenn., where it participated in several scouting expeditions and skirmishes. On the 24th it moved with its brigade and divisions and the department in the Tullahoma campaign assisting in driving the Confederates from their strong positions in the hills near Shelbyville, through Duck River valley, and over the Cumberland Mts., and across the Tennessee River. On July 2nd the regiment occupied Wartrace, a month later moved to Tullahoma, and on September 5th entered upon the Chickamauga Campaign marching over the Cumberland Mts., via, Stevenson and Bridgeport, Ala., and Chattanooga, Tenn., to Rossville, Ga.; the portion of the Reserve Corps taking part in the campaign of the 96th Illinois, the 2nd brigade commanded by Col. T. E. Champion of the 96th Illinois, the 2d Brigade being commanded by Col. Mitchell, both of the 1st division and the 2nd brigade of the 2nd division, commanded by Col. Daniel McCook; these three brigades composing for that campaign, what was known as Steedman's division of the Reserve Corps. About that time Brig. Gen. W. C. Whitaker resumed command of the brigade. On the 18th of September it participated, with its brigade, in the movements against Scott's Cavalry on the Ringold Road near the Chickamauga and the skirmish connected therewith. On the 19th of September it was with its brigade in the action near McAfee Church, suffering a loss of about 10 men. On September 20, 1863 it moved with its brigade, followed by Col. Mitchell's brigade, to the support of Maj. Gen. Thomas on Snodgrass Hill, which position was then about to be occupied by the rebel divisions of Generals Hindman and Bushrod Johnson. In the assault upon Snodgrass Hill the 115th was in the center of the front line of Whitaker's brigade and occupied that position throughout all the afternoon of the second day of the Battle of Chickamauga, retiring in obedience to orders about dusk in the evening, having suffered the loss of about one-half its number. The 115th was in the most exposed position of any regiment in that bloody battle and held its place against great odds, successfully meeting the repeated assaults of Anderson's Confederate brigade and when out of ammunition joined in the last bayonet charge that drove Preston's division from the summit of the ridge near the close of the battle. For its gallant conduct in that action it received special commendation of its commanding generals and was granted the honor of carrying the division colors on the following day, as a mark of distinction. Among its lost were Lt. Col. Wm. Kinman and Capt. S. Barlow Espy, killed, and Capt. S. M. Huckstep and Lt. David Reed, mortally wounded.

The regiment was in the siege of Chattanooga occupying a position at Moccasin Point and suffering the privations of the army and was in the engagements at Wauhatchie and other actions around Chattanooga. On the re-organization of the army of the Cumberland the 115th was attached to the 2nd brigade, 1st division, 4th army corps, department of the Cumberland, Gen. Whitaker commanding the brigade; Stanley the division; Granger the corps; and Thomas the department. After the Battle of Mission Ridge it remained in camp at Shell Mound, Tenn., until the latter part of January, 1864, Col. Moore being commander of the post. It then marched to Cleveland, Tenn., and in the latter part of February participated in the Dalton raid under Maj. Gen. Palmer, losing six men in the action about Tunnel Hill. After that it returned to camp near Cleveland and remained there until the opening of the Atlanta Campaign. The regiment led the charge on Tunnel Hill on May 7th and was in the actions in front of Rocky Faced Ridge, driving the enemy through Buzzard Roost Gap. It was with its brigade in the Battle of Resaca, Ga., in which the regiment stubbornly resisted a charge of overwhelming numbers and for which it was commended in general orders, its loss being one officer and 30 men killed and wounded. By general order there were inscribed on its regimental banner the names of all the principal engagements of the military division of the Mississippi which resulted in the fall of Atlanta, its loss, during the Atlanta Campaign being 100 men. When Gen. Hood threw himself on Sherman's rear in October, 1864 and was marching on Chattanooga Co. D of this regiment occupied a block house in Buzzard Roost Gap, and held in check Hood's army for 10 hours, fighting stubbornly; it refused to surrender the Gap till the block house was rendered untenable and nearly demolished by the enemy's artillery. One-third of the company of 41 men was killed and wounded; the remainder surrendered with the highest honors of war. For this special act of gallantry the company commander, Capt. Samuel Hymer of Schuyler county, was given the brevet rank of major, and later was awarded a gold medal by the war department. The balance of the regiment being then stationed at Tunnel Hill successfully defended itself against Hood's forces until ordered to retreat the following morning. When Sherman began his march to the sea and the 4th army Corps, under Gen. Stanley and the 23rd Corps under Gen. Scofield, started North, the 115th tore up the railroad track and hauled the rails away from Kingston, Ga., to Chattanooga. The regiment was then attached to Steedman's provisional division at Chattanooga and went with it to Nashville. Col. Moore commanding one of the brigades. The regiment then rejoined its old brigade and took part in the Battle of Nashville which resulted in the destruction of Bragg's old veteran army, then commanded by Gen. Hood. Soon after that Col. Moore succeeded to the command of the brigade, the regiment being with it in the pursuit of Hood to Northern Alabama, Hood having been driven with the remains of a broken army across the Tennessee, the regiment with the 4th army Corps marched to Huntsville, Ala., and went into camp on the 5th of January, 1865. On the 14th of March it started for East Tennessee, thence expecting to move by way of Lynchburg, Va., to assist in the capture of Richmond; but while in the vicinity of Greenville, Tenn., Richmond fell and the rebel Gen. Lee surrendered. The regiment then moved back with the 4th Army Corps and went into camp near Nashville, Tenn., and there remained till mustered out of the service, June 11, 1865. It arrived at Camp Butler, Ill., June 16, 1865, and received final pay and discharge June 28, 1865.

The brigade to which the 115th was attached, for nearly its entire service, without material alteration, was known throughout the department as the "Iron Brigade of Chickamauga."

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTEENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Sixteenth Infantry was recruited almost wholly from Macon county, numbering 980 officers and men when it started from Decatur for the front on November 8, 1862.

Company F was from McLean county, Company H, from Christian and Shelby counties. The Regiment, with the noble and brave Colonel Nathan W. Tupper in command, went into Camp Macon near Decatur, and was mustered into United States service September 30, 1862 by Captain Wainwright of the regular army.

The Regiment remained in Camp Macon until November 8th, when it was ordered to Memphis via Cairo to join General W. T. Sherman's Fifteenth Army Corps, and was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division (the same which General Sherman commanded at Shiloh,) and the one he selected from his whole army subsequently near Savannah, Georgia, to storm Fort McAllister, to open his cracker line, as the General facetiously put it.

From Memphis the Regiment marched to the Tallahatchie River, reaching it on December 13; returned to Memphis and started down the Mississippi on the 20th, and on the 26th reached the Yazoo River and ascended it 15 miles.

During the following three days the Regiment received its first baptism of fire, engaging in the battle of Chicksaw Bayou, the officers and men fighting so gallantly as to receive the highest compliments from the veterans of the older regiments in the Brigade. General Morgan L. Smith was wounded in this engagement.

On January 1, 1863, passed down the Yazoo to the Mississippi River, and up that and the Arkansas River to Arkansas Post, where on the 10th and 11th of January it fought its second battle, sustaining very heavy losses. Here Captain Lewis Eyman, of Company F, and Lieutenant John S. Taylor, of Company B, were killed. The casualties in Company B were particularly severe, the company coming out of the battle with but 25 men, in command of Fifth Sergeant, afterward Lieutenant and Captain Christian Rielsame.

On the 22d of January landed at Young's Point, Louisiana, opposite Vicksburg and assisted in digging the historical canal; it was here during the next 2 months that the One Hundred and Sixteenth lost over 100 of its members by sickness. Their remains were buried on the levee, no other ground being available; this was the only ground that was high enough to serve as a graveyard; but it has long since been swept away and the bones of the patriot dead have been carried down the gulf.

In the month of March the One Hundred and Sixteenth went up the Black Bayou and Deer Creek in company with the Eighth Missouri, to save Admiral Porter's fleet and gunboats worth $3,000,000 from the clutches of the rebels, which was done after a hard fight, General Sherman in person and on foot with his own Regiment, the Thirtieth Regulars, coming up at a critical moment to assist in accomplishing the object.

The Regiment engaged in the battles of Champion Hills and Black River Bridge and in the bloody charges on May 18th and 22d and lost very heavily. Among the losses and casualties were these: Lieutenant Colonel Jas. P. Boyd was shot through the lungs and died of this wound at his home in Decatur. Captain Gustin F. Hardy of Company A, was mortally wounded and died in the hospital. Lieutenant Nathan W. Wheeler, of Company K, was killed May 22d. Captain Joseph Lingle, of Company D, was wounded and died at home, and Captain William Grason, of Company A, was shot through the breast, but recovered. Captain Austin McClurg, of Company B, was wounded, recovered and promoted Major. Then followed the long siege of Vicksburg which ended by the surrender of that stronghold on the 4th of July.

The following day started in pursuit of General Jos. E. Johnston, and chased the enemy to and beyond Jackson, Mississippi, and across Pearl River.

On July 25, went into Camp Sherman, near Black River, enjoying a season of rest until after the battle of Chickamauga, when General Grant sent for his trusty lieutenant, General Sherman, and his veterans, to come to Chattanooga.

The One Hundred and Sixteenth embarked at Vicksburg in October for Memphis; from thence marched via Corinth to Chattanooga, which was reached on the 21st of November. During the night of November 23d the One Hundred and Sixteenth Illinois and Sixth Missouri Regiments, under General Giles A. Smith, floated down the Tennessee River in pontoon boats to the mouth of Chickamauga Creek, capturing the rebel pickets and holding the position until the whole Corps had crossed over.

On November 24, advanced to the foot of Missionary Ridge, after a lively skirmish, during which General Giles A. Smith was severely wounded. (The General's death after the war was the result of the wound received that day.)

The great battle of Missionary Ridge, Tunnel Hill and Lookout Mountain was fought next day, November 25.

The One Hundred and Sixteenth, with the other Regiments of the Brigade, formed the extreme left of General Sherman's Army, and obtained the credit of turning the enemy's right flank on that bloody day.

Colonel N. W. Tupper, after General Smith was disabled, assumed command of the Brigade, and proved that he was the right man in the right place. When disease, contracted in the service of his country, and of which he died on the 10th day of March, 1864, compelled him to leave the army, every man in the One Hundred and Sixteenth felt that he had lost a friend and the Nation a patriot.

After the victory of Chattanooga, and without being permitted to return to camp across the Tennessee for blankets or overcoats, the One Hundred and Sixteenth, with others of Sherman's Army, was hurried forward to Knoxville to the relief of Burnside. The winter was a very cold one, and while the boys could keep warm marching twenty-five to thirty miles during the day, they suffered greatly while camping at night. They would build big fires and hug them close, but the other side would be chilled to the marrow of the bones; rations, also, were very short, and when at last the Regiment went into winter quarters on January 9, 1864, at Larkinsville, Ala., the men all felt that they had been on the hardest campaign during their service.

The march from Missionary Ridge to Knoxville, and back to Larkinsville via Tellico and Strawberry Plains and Chattanooga, will never be forgotten by Sherman's boys who were along.

In May, the One Hundred and Sixteenth, with the rest of the Army of the Tennessee, moved against the enemy, and found him at Resaca, Ga., where, on the 14th of May, the Regiment was hotly engaged, losing heavily, but driving the enemy across the creek, and planting their colors upon the rebel works. The One Hundred and Sixteenth was repeatedly attacked, but could not be driven from the position gained. It was in this battle that Major Anderson Froman was wounded, and he died in the field hospital.

Then followed in quick succession the battles of Dallas, Big Shanty and Kenesaw Mountain. Captain Thomas White, of Company C, commanding the Regiment, was killed on the skirmish line May 26, at Dallas, and Captain James N. Glore, Company K, was wounded about the same time. The Regiment lost heavily on June 27, 1864, in the assault on Kenesaw Mountain. Among the wounded was Lieut. John H. Miller, of Company B.

Crossing the Chattahoochee, engaged the enemy at Stone Mountain, driving him to the vicinity of Atlanta. Fought in the battle of Atlanta, July 22, (where its Army Commander, General McPherson, fell) and with the Fifteenth Corps, General Logan, the hot battle of Ezra Chapel, July 28.

Captain George T. Milmine, Company D, and Lieutenant Samuel R. Riggs, Company F, were wounded before Atlanta in August, 1864.

August 31 and September 1, was hotly engaged with the enemy at Jonesboro.

After the fall of Atlanta, and when Hood started for General Sherman's rear, the One Hundred and Sixteenth assisted in the pursuit of the enemy as far as Gadston, when, leaving the rebels to the care of General Thomas, marched back to Atlanta, and on the 15th day of November went with Uncle Sherman from Atlanta to the Sea, arriving at Fort McAllister, Ga., near Savannah, December 12.

The next day, December 13, General W. B. Hazen, commanding Division, selected nine regiments, including the One Hundred and Sixteenth, to carry the fort, and within five minutes after the sound of the bugle "Forward" the Regimental colors were on the works and the garrison captured. Lieutenant Isom Simmons, of Company H, was killed in this charge.

After a few days rest in the beautiful city of Savannah, we started on the campaign of the Carolinas, hunting the enemy and finding him first near the swamps of Pocotaligo, chased him through creeks and across rivers, skirmishing constantly until nearing Columbia, S. C., where the Fifteenth Corps, the One Hundred and Sixteenth included, ran short of chewing tobacco. Learning that there was an ample supply of the article in the city of Columbia, paid that city a visit on the 17th of February, 1865, and replenished stock. After a few days rest resumed march, facing home, crossing the great Pedee River at Cheraw, S. C., thence to Fayetteville, N. C., and to Bentonville, where the One Hundred and Sixteenth for the last time encountered its old foe, General Joe. E. Johnston's Army, and fought its last battle. From Goldsboro, where the army was re-equipped (and it was in need of everything except the musket and forty rounds), the Regiment started picnicing for Washington via Raleigh, Richmond and Alexandria, participating in the grand review before the President in May, 1865, being finally mustered out near Washington on June 7, 1865.

The history of the One Hundred and Sixteenth Infantry is identical with that of the Army of the Tennessee from Memphis, 1862, to Washington, 1865. It was never on detached service, but always with the moving column.

The Regiment was peculiarly fortunate in retaining through its eventful history the very efficient services of its medical staff, and the members had plenty of work to do. Major Ira N. Barnes, M. D., Decatur, Ill.; Assistant Surgeon John A. Heckelman, M. D., St. Louis, and Assistant Surgeon J. H. Hostettler, M. D., Decatur, all served to the end of the war, and every one of the 350 survivors in 1865 had cause to feel grateful to them.

The esprit de corps of the Regiment, under the command of Colonel Tupper, was splendid, and under such Brigade Commanders as General Giles A. Smith, and Division Commanders as W. B. Hazen, retained it to the end of the war.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTEENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Seventeenth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Camp Butler, Ill., in September, 1862, by Colonel Risdon M. Moore, and was mustered in September 19, by Captain Washington, United States Army.

Moved from Camp Butler, November 11, and arrived at Memphis, Tenn., on the 17th. Remained on duty at Memphis until July 5, 1863, when it was sent to reinforce Helena, Ark., and returned. December 25, it was sent after Forrest, in Western Tennessee, losing 3 men killed in a skirmish at LaFayette, Tenn.

December 29, 1863, moved to Vicksburg, in Third Brigade, Third Division, Sixteenth Army Corps. Was engaged in the Meridian Campaign. On 5th February was engaged in a skirmish, losing 2 killed and 5 wounded. Returned to Vicksburg, March 4. On 10th of March, embarked for Red River expedition. Assisted in the capture of Fort DeRussey, March 14, 1864. Engaged in the battle of Pleasant Hill, April 9. Moved to Grand Ecore, 11th. On 14th, was sent to relief of the gunboats and transports, at Campa, La., and was engaged at Cloutierville and Cane River; at Bayou Rapids, May 2; at Governor Moore's plantation and Bayou Roberts, May 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 11. Continued on return march to Mississippi River, on 14th, skirmishing daily. In battle of Yellow Bayou, May 18, and arrived at Mississippi River on 20th, and at Vicksburg on 27th. Took part in driving Marmaduke from Chicot Lake and Columbia, Ark., and arrived at Memphis, June 10, 1864.

Marched to the relief of Sturgis on June 14th, and, on 23d, commenced the Tupelo Campaign. Was engaged at Tupelo July 14th, and at Old Town Creek, 15th. Commenced Oxford Campaign August 5th. Was engaged at Hurricane Creek, 18th, 19th and 20th, and returned to Memphis on 30th.

Arrived at Jefferson Barracks September 19th. Was engaged October 1st at Franklin. Moved via Jefferson City, Sedalia, Lexington, Independence and Harrisonville, and returned to St. Louis, November 19th.

Moved to Nashville, Tenn., and took position in the works, December 1, 1864. Was engaged in the battle of Nashville, December 15th and 16th, in pursuit of Hood. Regiment captured rebel battery of 3 guns, December 15th, and turned them upon the retreating enemy. Reached Clifton, January 4th, 1865. Embarked at Eastport for New Orleans, arriving January 17. Embarked at Chalmette March 7, and moved to Dauphine Island. Moved to Fish River with the Sixteenth Corps, Major A. J. Smith commanding. Engaged at Spanish Fort, from March 27 till April 2, and at Fort Blakely until the 9th, taking part in its capture.

Marched for Montgomery April 13, and thence to Camp Butler, Ill., where the Regiment was mustered out August 5, 1865, by Captain James A. Hall, United States Army.

Young, Isaac C.....	Warsaw.....	Jan. 23, 1864		Discharged July 29, 1864...

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTEENTH INFANTRY.

The troops composing this Regiment enlisted under the call of the President of July 2, 1862, and the companies were formed during August, 1862, and from the following places and counties: Company A, Captain Thomas J. Campbell, Fountain Green; Company B, Captain R. W. McClaughry, Carthage; Company C, Captain A. W. Marsh, Hamilton; Company E, Captain J. S. Allen, Warsaw, and Company H, Captain F. G. Mourning, Basco, all in Hancock county,—Company D, Captain J. H. Holton, Quincy; Company F, Captain W. J. Evans, Richfield, and Company K, Captain J. D. Rosenbook, Mendon, Adams county; Company G, Captain Joseph Shaw, Terre Haute, Henderson county, and Company I, Captain Charles During, Gallatin county.

The companies rendezvoused at Camp Butler during the month of September, 1862, were respectively sworn into the service by Adjutant General Fuller, and organized into a Regiment. In October an election was held for Regimental officers, at which Major John G. Fonda, of the Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, then commanding Camp Butler, was selected Lieutenant Colonel, Captain R. W. McClaughry, Major, Madison Reece, Surgeon, J. K. Boude, Assistant Surgeon, W. K. Davison, Quartermaster, and Thomas M. Walker, Chaplain.

The Regiment remained on duty in charge of the post and guarding rebel prisoners until December. It was mustered into the United States service on the 7th of November, 1862, by Captain Washington, for three years,—with a total of 820 men and officers. November 21, it was armed with Enfield Rifles. November 29, Lieutenant Colonel Fonda was promoted to Colonel, and Captain Thomas Logan, of Company G, Twelfth Illinois Cavalry, was made Lieutenant Colonel. December 1, left by Chicago and Alton Railroad, for Alton, and there by boat to St. Louis and below, arrived at Memphis, Tenn., and went into camp on Wolf River. Here the Regiment was assigned to the First Brigade (Colonel Sheldon, Forty-second Ohio commanding) Third Division, General G. W. Morgan—and Thirteenth Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee. While here received its first tents, first watery beds, first "powder and ball" cartridges, its first scare, first "turn out for firing on the pickets," and first introduction to rebel jay hawkers, in a night and a day skirmish.

On December 20, embarked on the steamer "Northerner" with forces under General Sherman, for Vicksburg, Miss. Reached Milliken's Bend December 25, and the following day proceeded up the Yazoo River, and participated in the attack upon Chickasaw Bluffs, from the 26th of December to January 2, 1863. On January 2, after the troops had re-embarked, the Regiment while on boat was under a heavy fire from a rebel line.

From here proceeded with the force under General McClelland to Arkansas Post, Ark., and took part in the two days fight January 10 and 11, which resulted in the capture of that fort and some 6,000 prisoners.

January 23, returned to Young's Point, La., where it assisted in digging in the famous "canal," and remained till March 9, when it moved to Milliken's Bend and went into camp.

The Regiment was now Brigaded with the Forty-ninth and Sixty-ninth Indiana, One Hundred and Twentieth Ohio, Seventh Kentucky, First Wisconsin and Seventh Michigan Batteries and part of the Third Illinois Cavalry, as the First Brigade, General T. T. Garrard commanding, Ninth Division, General P. J. Osterhaus, and Thirteenth Army Corps, General John A. McClernand. On April 2, moved out in the expedition against Vicksburg under General Grant, crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg April 30, 1863, and took part in the battles of Thompson's Hill (Port Gibson,) May 1, Champion Hill, May 16, Black River Bridge, May 17, and the assaults upon Vicksburg May 19 to 23,—in the former two and the latter two suffering severely in killed and wounded. In the battle of Black River Bridge, a whole rebel regiment was captured by, and surrendered to Company D, commanded by Captain Brown.

May 24, moved with General Osterhaus' Division to Black River Bridge, and there remained until the surrender of Vicksburg, holding the rear against rebel General Joseph E. Johnston's forces, having frequent skirmishes with them. About June 10, a Battalion of the Regiment was mounted by order of General Grant.

July 6, started with force under General Sherman to Jackson, Miss., and took part in the fighting and siege from the 10th to the 17th, and from the 17th to the 20th. The mounted portion of the Regiment went on a raid to Brookhaven, a distance of 60 miles, and back, having frequent skirmishes, tore up the railroad and burned the rolling stock and depot buildings.

July 22 started for Vicksburg, where it arrived July 25, and went into camp on the flats below the city.

While here the Regiment was dismounted and its horses turned over to the Quartermaster's Department, and the Regiment with the Thirteenth Army Corps was turned over to the Department of the Gulf.

August 8 left by boat for Port Hudson, where it went into camp the next day. Remained there until August 15. Shipped for Carrollton, La., and encamped there on the 16th. September 4, joined in a grand review of 20,000 troops, by Generals Grant and Banks. September 5, crossed the river to Algiers, on the 6th, took cars for Bayou Boeuf, where arrived the morning of the 7th.

September 16, marched to Brashear City on Berwick Bay. September 26, crossed Berwick Bay to Berwick City. October 3, started with an expedition under General Franklin up the Teche Bayou, at Camp Bisland, that night received orders to report to General A. L. Lee, chief of cavalry, Department of Gulf, at Algiers, La. October 6 took the boat to Brashear, and cars to Algiers, arriving there on the morning of October 7.

The Regiment having been again mounted, on October 11, returned by cars to Brashear, crossed the bay and started on the march. October 12, marched to Franklin, La. 13th, New Iberia. October 14, rejoined the main force and our Army Corps (Thirteenth.) October 15, passed Vermillionville, having a heavy skirmish, and at night reached "Carrion Crow Bayou." October 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20, scouting and skirmishing. October 18, Colonel Fonda assigned to the command of the Brigade composed of the One Hundred and Eighteenth Illinois Mounted Infantry, Second Illinois, Fourteenth New York and First Louisiana Cavalry. October 21, marched to Opelousas, skirmishing all the way. October 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 28 and 30, scouting and skirmishing with the rebels. November 1, moved back to Bayou Bourbent, or Carrion Crow Bayou, or Grand Coteau as it is known. November 2, heavy skirmishing. November 3, in the battle of Carrion Crow Bayou, or as sometimes called Grand Coteau, in which our forces lost two regiments and a battery, and about 100 to 150 men killed and wounded.

On the 5th, reached Vermillion Bayou. On the 7th, re-brigaded with Second and Third Illinois Cavalry under command of Colonel Fonda. November 11, battle near Vermillionville, in which lost severely. November 15, moved to New Iberia. November 22 and 23, on a scout to Vermillion Bayou, heavy fight and captured 100 prisoners. December 2 and 3, scout to St. Martinsville, heavy skirmish and took some prisoners. Remained at New Iberia taking part in daily scouts and skirmishing until December 18, when received orders to march to Donaldsonville, La. On December 23, halted at General Bragg's plantation, at night camped on Senator Pugh's plantation—sorry the gentlemen were not at home,—but entertained ourselves with the delicacies thereof, reached Donaldsonville on the Mississippi December 24. January 3 to 7, 1864, the Regiment was transferred to Port Hudson. For some time the Regiment was without tents or shelter, in the mud, rain and snow, and suffered intensely, remained here doing outpost duty and scouting and skirmishing almost daily, until July 3. January 12, on a scout, had a skirmish, and captured a number of prisoners. January 21, received the first tents had since last August. February 10, after a fight captured Jackson, La., with some prisoners and much property. February 16, had a skirmish. February 22, a raid to Bayou Sara and a skirmish. March 3, Lieutenant Colonel Logan, with a detachment, went to Baton Rouge, and on the way had a skirmish, and Colonel Fonda with a detachment of the One Hundred and Eighteenth and the Third Illinois Cavalry made a raid to Jackson, La., and had a severe fight. March 26, detachments of the Regiment had skirmishes; Company D, Captain Brown commanding, were entirely surrounded by rebels, but cut their way out taking some prisoners. March 28, 30, April 1 and 5, had scouts and skirmishes. Early in April Lieutenant Colonel Logan, with about 150 men of the One Hundred and Eighteenth and Third Illinois Cavalry, crossed the Mississippi River to superintend the construction of telegraphic lines to Red River, made a scout to Bayou Gross Tete, encountered a largely superior rebel force, and after a determined saber charge had a hand-to-hand fight, routed the rebels, killing and wounding a large number, captured a large quantity of ammunition, stores etc., captured more prisoners than he had men in his command. April 7, Captain Shaw with 100 men of the One Hundred and Eight and Third Illinois Cavalry and one gun of a New York battery were attacked by 600 rebels, surrounded, and three times cut off from camp. After a desperate fight they succeeded in cutting their way out and reached camp with a loss of only 15 men and the gun.

May 13, 1864, Major R. W. McClaughry appointed Paymaster, U. S. A.

May 15, had a several hours fight with a large force of rebel cavalry, in which they killed and wounded several, and recaptured some prisoners they had before taken. Kept up the telegraph to the mouth of Red River until the failure of the Banks expedition, and while so doing companies A, B and F were on May 3d, cut off by the rebels, and relieved by the gunboat General Bragg.

June 13 and 17, had skirmishes.

July 3, moved to Baton Rouge, and were re-brigaded with the Sixth Missouri, Fourteenth New York and Second Louisiana Cavalry, under command of Colonel Fonda.

August 24th to 27th, with the command of General A. L. Lee, went to Clinton, La., on which we were fighting parts of two days and all one night, having a battle at the Comite River; and on the 26th, repeatedly charged the rebel column, fighting for miles.

September 4, marched to Doyal's plantation, and September 7, to Hermitage plantation, opposite Donaldsonville, to relieve the Eleventh New York Cavalry. From here scouted the surrounding country almost daily, and fought bushwackers and captured many.

September 14, October 2, 14 and 24, had skirmishes.

November 12th 200 of the Regiment, under Captain Evans, reported to General Lee, at Baton Rouge, and on the 15th, left with his command on a raid to Liberty, Miss. Part of the Regiment went with a detachment to Summit, on the Jackson and N. O. R. R., having a severe skirmish, and burning depot and cotton. A part went with a detachment to Brookhaven, had a fight, re-captured cannon taken from Captain Shaw, on April 7, and took many prisoners, and the remainder were in battle with General Lee, at Liberty.

November 19, returned to Baton Rouge. November 21, having been gone seven days, marched two hundred miles, and with other forces captured one cannon and over two hundred prisoners, and fought five of the seven days.

November 24, moved from Hermitage to Baton Rouge. November 27, left on an expedition under General Davidson, which marched across the Amite River, past Greenville Springs, Greensburg, Tangipahoe, across Tangipahoe and Techfaw Rivers, through Columbia and Bogue Chitto, Mississippi, over Pearl River, near Augusta, Alabama, across Red and Black Creeks, and reached West Pascagoula, on Mississippi Sound, December 12. During several days of this march, had skirmishes. Returned by vessel to New Orleans, and by boat, to Baton Rouge, on December 27, 1864. From this time to May 22, doing out-post duty, and almost daily scouts into the surrounding country, with frequent skirmishes with the rebels.

February 23, Lieutenant Colonel Logan, with the Regiment, made an expedition west of the Mississippi River. March 1 to 10, in an expedition under General Bailey, to Olive Branch, Louisiana. May 22, 1865, by order, turned the horses over to the Post Quartermaster, and from that time until October 1 remained on provost duty at Baton Rouge.

Colonel Fonda commanded a Cavalry Brigade from October, 1863, until May, 1865. June 28, 1865, he was Brevetted Brigadier General, and assigned to the command of the District of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, which command he held until October, 1865.

In September, 1865, almost the entire Regiment had the "breakbone fever," at one time, less than a hundred men and officers being able to do duty.

October 1, 1865, mustered out by Lieutenant E. M. Schuyver, First New Orleans Volunteers.

October 2, embarked on steamer W. R. Carter, for the North. Reached Cairo, Illinois, October 8, St. Louis, Missouri, October 9, thence by railroad to Camp Butler, October 10, 1865, where the Regiment was mustered in November 7, 1862. Were paid off by Paymaster Major Holbrook, on October 13, 1865, and the Regiment thence disbanded and forever separated.

The number of battles, or days of battles, in which the Regiment or a considerable portion were engaged, amounts to over forty. The number of skirmishes in which the Regiment or a detachment took part, outside of mere picket skirmishing, is over sixty; making over one hundred days in which some portion of the Regiment was engaged with the enemy.

The movements by railroad of the Regiment, aggregate some four hundred miles; by steamboat and vessel, 3,300 miles, and the marches of the Regiment, as a body, irrespective of what would be termed "scouts," or little expeditions of the Regiment or detachment thereof, about 2,000 miles, making a distance traveled by the Regiment of over 5,700 miles.

The Regiment was mustered into the service with 800 men and officers; received 283 recruits, making a total of 1,103; mustered out October 1, 1865, 523. The losses are as follows: 267 resigned and discharged for disability; 176 died; 63 missing; 17 killed in battle; 1 dishonorably discharged; 2 accidentally killed; 1 lost at sea; 2 drowned; 1 committed suicide; 7 absent at muster; 3 discharged by the President; 1 dismissed the service, and 25 transferred to other branches of the service, leaving 14 unaccounted for. This statement does not include 36 mustered under cooks, and 25 unassigned recruits who never reached the Regiment.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND NINETEENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Nineteenth Infantry was organized at Quincy, in September, 1862, and was mustered into the United States service, October 10, by Lieutenant K. Knox, of the United States Army. It was recruited from the counties of Adams, Brown, Hancock, McDonough and Schuyler. Thomas J. Kinney, Captain of Company B, was elected Colonel, and no man in the Regiment ever found cause to regret this selection. He was brave, generous, considerate and reliable under all circumstances.

The latter part of October the Regiment moved under orders, by transport, to Columbus, Kentucky, and from thence to Jackson, Tennessee. From this point we were stationed at different points along the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, guarding the lines of communication. In December, General Forrest made an effort to destroy the roads in this section, capturing at Rutherford Station, Company G, and K, at Dyer Station. Three of the Companies were stationed at Kenton, and anticipating the attack, fell back towards Columbus, Kentucky, and when near Union City, Tennessee, joined the advancing forces. General Cheatham was supposed to be marching on Columbus, and the entire force fell back to this point.

The Christmas times were employed here in digging ditches in the rain, and preparing for anticipated attack. Either the apprehension was groundless, or else the enemy feared the forces. General Davies was then commanding the post, but was soon relieved by General J. M. Tuttle. Our presence having restored quiet in this quarter, the work of re-constructing the railroad was commenced, and we remained at Union City for a time, impressing the natives, including the contrabands, into the service, for work repairing the railroad. This work accomplished in February, by order we reported, and our scattered companies came together at Humboldt, Tennessee. From this point, with other forces added, a movement was made eastward to Huntington, Tennessee, expecting to meet or attract the enemy at this point. The march was in the worst of weather; the roads in just the condition to provoke the wrath of the most devout. Our Headquarters were established at Buntyn Station, about six miles out from Memphis. This was about March 10, 1863. At this point, and one or two others along the road, we guarded the approach to Memphis. This we did effectually, and much to our enjoyment until May 30, 1863, we were ordered into Memphis, and assigned to the Fourth Brigade, Colonel David Moore commanding; Fifth Division, Brigadier General J. C. Veatch commanding; Sixteenth Corps, Major General S. A. Hurlburt commanding.

The Brigade was composed of the Fifty-eighth Illinois, Twenty-first Missouri, Eighty-ninth Indiana, One Hundred and Nineteenth Illinois Infantry Volunteers, and the Ninth Ohio Battery, commanded respectively by Colonels W. F. Lynch, David Moore, Charles D. Murray, (Colonel of Eighty-ninth Indiana,) Thomas J. Kinney and Captain Brown, the Battery. We mention the Brigade organization, for as above composed it remained during the war, and the history of one regiment is the history of each. In the after scenes we sympathized, endured and fought together. Our Regiment remained on duty in and about Memphis until in January, 1864, guarding the roads entering into the city, and such provost work and other duties as details might be ordered. If I except the daily drills, squad, company and battalion, this was the "good time" of our recollections.

On August 14, 1863, George Parker, Captain of Company B, died, the result of amputation of a broken leg. He was a brave and accomplished officer and a true friend.

On or about January 27th, 1864, the Regiment moved by transport down the Mississippi to Vicksburg. From here we marched with quite an army, General W. T. Sherman commanding, to Meridian, Miss. En route, and before reaching Jackson, Miss., we were engaged in several skirmishes, but without regimental loss. We met the enemy at Meridian. At this point, the bridge across quite a stream being burned, we were annoyed by the firing of the enemy from behind cotton bale works, until a temporary structure enabled us to cross, when, on the double quick, we routed the enemy, and occupied Meridian, situate on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. From this point north and south we effectually destroyed communication by tearing up the rails, heating them on burning ties, and bending to prevent future use until again run through the rolling mills. A temporary stay in this section developed in a return movement by a somewhat different route, crossing Pearl River north of Jackson, and through Canton back to Vicksburg. The march was a weary one. Removed from our base of supplies, foraging was largely depended upon for subsistence.

At Vicksburg we rested for a time, from about March 4th until the 10th, when we again embarked on transports. Objective points were always unknown: but we disembarked at Simsport, on the Atchafalaya, and entered upon the Red River campaign. We here surprised a small Rebel camp, they falling back in the direction of Fort De Russey. The gunboats from the river, and our forces from the land side, on or about March 12th, captured the fort with 283 prisoners and 10 guns. This, after a march in one day of 40 miles, and the work all done by sunset. The main Rebel force escaped up the river, commanded by Walker. Marching to Alexandria, we halted for a time for the arrival of Banks' command, doing general duty, and engaging in occasional raids with meagre results.

We joined in the general advance to Shreveport, bringing up the rear. We were called upon to engage in the second day's fight, and, as a part of A. J. Smith's veterans, we assisted in routing the enemy, and retaking one of the lost batteries and a number of prisoners—this last by our own particular Brigade. We fell back and guarded the rear of the retreating army until reaching Alexandria. Here a halt was necessitated by the receding river. Our gunboats were unable to pass through the rapids. This developed the Bailey plan of wing dams to press the water into the narrow channel. These we helped to construct, and they proved successful. The boats over, we moved toward Simsport on the Atchafalaya, the initial point of our campaign.

At Mansura, near Marksville, we had a skirmish which resulted in rout to the enemy. Still in the rear, we were attacked at Yellow Bayou by a large force, which occasioned a desperate fight, General Smith commanding. We did valiant service, losing many men. Captain May, of Company I, was killed here. Colonel Lynch, commanding our Brigade, was here wounded, and the command of the Brigade devolved upon Colonel Kinney. He was a brave man, and from this wound, years afterward, he died. Putting bow to bow of many steamers, a bridge was formed across the Atchafalaya, and now, after forty days and forty nights in sound of the enemy's guns, and always at the post of danger, we are freed from the orders of General Banks, who was relieved by General Canby.

We were ordered back up the Mississippi. We were landed in the southeastern part of Arkansas, and at Lake Chicot engaged a Rebel force successfully. This was reported to be under command of Marmaduke, and was well entrenched across a bayou; but we fought as always to win, and drove the enemy, who retreated and left us the field. We made a detour and reached transports, and were moved up the river, and disembarked next at Memphis to assist in wiping out the disaster of Major General S. D. Sturgis, at Guntown. We arrived at Memphis about June 24th, and moved by rail to Lagrange, where the One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois Infantry Volunteers, Colonel J. I. Rinker, was assigned to our Brigade, and July 5th commenced marching through Mississippi. Met Forrest on July 14th, at Tupelo, Miss. The battle was admirably planned, skillfully and desperately fought, resulting in a victory fully convincing the enemy that Guntown was remembered. At bugle sound we assumed position, and poured a deadly volley upon the forces, now so near that we could see the men face to face. The dead and wounded were many; and after several advances, charges and retreats, we rejoiced in a signal victory.

After a day's delay burying the dead and caring for the wounded, we started on a return movement. This was without interference, except cavalry skirmishing at Old Town Creek the next day, after the battle. Withdrawing to Memphis, another movement was made into Mississippi, through Holly Springs to the Tallahatchie. No enemy interfered with this campaign. At this time Forrest flanked our forces, and made his raid into Memphis.

Returning to Memphis, under orders to report to Sherman in Georgia, we took transports up the river. Developments in Missouri, and the movements of Price in that direction, made it necessary to reinforce Rosecrans, then commanding this department, with headquarters at St. Louis. Our objective point, by order of General Halleck, was changed, and accordingly we reported to Rosecrans at St. Louis.

We at one time moved south from Jefferson Barracks to intercept Price; but at length fully organized under command of General Smith, we started westward in the vain attempt to out travel and overtake a mounted enemy. We moved along, without obstacle, until we were left at Lamine River to guard supplies, the enemy having burned the bridge. From this point we advanced towards Dunksburg. We forded the rivers on all occasions, all bridges being destroyed, which was no pleasant occupation for October. We well remember going into camp late one night, about October 22, and after enjoying a cup of coffee we were ordered to fall in, and we marched all night, passing through Independence about day break, and pressing towards the Big Blue. This point we reached too late for usefulness. We could hear the fight going on, but the enemy were routed before our arrival. We found Price in full retreat. Pursuing no further, we soon after began our movement back towards St. Louis.

We had marched a distance of about 700 miles: a weary and uncomfortable march; exposure to the elements more than to the enemy, but truly, a trip that tried the mettle of the soldier.

From this point, St. Louis, we were loaded on steamboats and passed down the Mississippi and up the Cumberland River to Nashville, and here reported to General Thomas at, or about, December 1, 1864. Disembarking, we were marched out late in the day, going into camp after night on the right of the then collected forces. Here Colonel Kinney being the ranking officer, took command of the Division, until General Kenand Gerrard was assigned to command, when Kinney returned to command of the Brigade. We did some faithful work, entrenching and throwing up earthworks, expecting Hood to attack.

On one bright day, December 15, we left our defences, and moved on the enemy, and in two days' battle, officers and men acquitted themselves honorably. Our loss was slight. We captured a battery of brass guns. We never fell back in any movement during the battle. The enemy routed and fleeing, we joined the movement south, over the Granny White Pike, seeking the retreating and flying enemy.

We marched through Franklin, passing the late field of carnage here, camping just south of the town. It may have rained before, but it now made a success of it. We lay until morning by letting the water run over our bodies, our heads propped up above high water mark. On through Columbia, crossing Duck River without resistance, Hood's forces being now effectually dissipated. We enjoyed our Christmas and New Year's on this trip. How we enjoyed it, we know.

We were transported from Clifton, on the Tennessee River, to Eastport, Miss. At this point we had much to amuse and annoy—little to do and less to eat. A cavalry movement having been contemplated from this point, the Quartermasters and Commissaries had all thoughts fixed on horses, so that supplies arriving were for beast and not man. Parched corn and improvised corn cakes from cracked corn, with occasional efforts to digest hay, was our diet for over a week. The unexpected rise in the river gave us occupation in that we were trying to save the immense supply of grain, but nevertheless the Government lost heavily by the freshets.

Always a reinforcing Division, Brigade and Regiment, a weak point or a point of attack seemed to turn attention to us. At this juncture a contemplated movement against Mobile resulted in orders for our reporting to General Canby, then selected to command in this attack. Again we embarked on transports, and after days of tiresome steamboat confinement down the Tennessee, and then the Mississippi, we arrived at New Orleans, arriving the latter part of February, 1865, on the opposite side, in the town of Algiers. Remaining in camp for several days, finding shelter in an old sugar house in the shadow of the monument erected in commemoration of the battle of New Orleans, we spent the time awaiting embarkation. We shipped from New Orleans on a boat for the mouth of the Mississippi. We disembarked at what seemed a coal-ing station near its mouth, constructed of plank which seemed floating among the grasses. Here the fresh oyster opportunity broke upon us, and we bought, begged and grabbed all in reach from incoming natives. But eating was not our mission, so the Fairchild, a half sea-going vessel, carried us out the mouth of the Mississippi into the Gulf, and brought us alongside the steamer Guiding Star. So we were stored on board a sea-going vessel, and steamed into the Gulf. This riding on the seas is disturbing to a well regulated stomach, but we heaved with the sea, and finally landed on Dauphine Island, off Mobile Bay, about March 12, 1865, moved March 21st to the mouth of Fish River. This was as if an opening into a swamp, but vessels pushed up its dull and sluggish channel. After putting our feet on the land we advanced, resisted only by skirmishers. The roads were planted with torpedoes, and occasional explosions were deadly. Not a few men and horses were in this way killed or wounded.

March 27, 1865, Spanish Fort was invested while we directed our attention to Fort Blakely. This investment of Spanish Fort continued until April the 8th, when all the guns small and great opened their fires upon the doomed fort, and this grandest of all sounding battles or bombardments silenced the fort. This fort was constructed for resistance. The approach over a plateau, bristled with abattis, palisades, ditches, and with its cannon arranged for death dealing. We had been on picket all night, and so were to the front for the assault on Sunday afternoon about April 9th. The time came for a charge on this stronghold. So struggling with all manner of obstructions, and amid shell canister, grape shot and musketry for about an hour we overcame all obstacles and resistance; mounted the works, took the Fort; captured the enemy, and complete victory was ours. Our loss was not heavy, Company A suffering the most. How we danced over our prizes in the way of prisoners, guns, swords, flags and ordnance stores! Once again we could square ordnance accounts. This battle was fought after Lee's surrender, and when the war was practically ended. After marching several days, about April 19th, we began to hear rumors of Lee's surrender. At last official notification reached us that Lee had surrendered, and the demonstration we made is simply indescribable. This was the happy day of the war to us.

We marched on however, to Montgomery, Alabama. Here we were received by the citizens with a measure of apprehension. Gentlemanly conduct convinced them that we were without "horns" or "cloven feet," so we had a comfortable sojourn of a few weeks at this delightful place.

While at this point, discipline demanded the organization of a court martial, and we tarried long enough to apply the rules and regulations to offenders.

From Montgomery we moved south in the hottest of weather, when as much as a leaf to shade a man was better than a feast.

We marched to a point about one hundred miles above, and took transports for shipment to Mobile.

Our Regiment embarked on the Osborn, and reached Mobile in comparatively good condition. Here we entered upon fatigue service, such as details for guards, and provost duty.

Colonel Kinney was ordered to report, and assigned to duty as provost marshal of the department and District of Mobile with some of his command as assistants. He was the executive officer in all matters pertaining both to the civil and military life, directing the soldier and protecting the citizen. A position demanding quick and accurate judgment, and unbending determination in all the varied questions under his jurisdiction and control. He measured himself a man in all these things, and won the commendation of his associates.

Here we were mustered out in August, 1865, Kinney only a brigadier, and the rest of us all feeling like major generals.

Coasting via Lake Pontchartrain up the Mississippi to Cairo, and from thence to Camp Butler, near Springfield, where we were finally paid off, rehabilitated as citizens, and dispersed to our several homes, rejoiced at the outcome for our country and ourselves.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTIETH INFANTRY.

This Regiment was organized at a time when there was an immediate demand for soldiers in the field. Permission had been given Colonel John G. Hardy, and Colonel George W. McKeaig each to raise a regiment. The first was assigned the number One Hundred and Twentieth and the other One Hundred and Thirty-second. Colonel Hardy recruited seven companies—A, B, C, E, G, I and K—and went into camp at Vienna, Aug. 13, 1862. Colonel McKeaig recruited three companies, D, F and H, and went into camp at Shawneetown, August 15.

In September, both organizations were ordered to Camp Butler, and soon after their arrival there, they were, at the request of Governor Yates, consolidated as the One Hundred and Twentieth Infantry, and it was mustered into the United States service October 28, by Lieutenant E. M. Curtis.

In the consolidation of the Regiments, Colonel George W. McKeaig, of the One Hundred and Thirty-second, was given the colonelcy and Bluford Wilson, of the same organization, was made Adjutant, while all the other field officers were taken from the One Hundred and Thirty-second.

The first order received for actual duty was from Colonel Fonda, which was to guard the railroad bridge at "Jintown," which duty was performed until November 9, when the Regiment left for Alton; thence it moved to St. Louis on steamer Stephen Decatur, and reported to General Halleck from whom orders were received to report without delay to General Sherman at Memphis. Upon our arrival there General Sherman assigned the Regiment to the First Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, General Morgan L. Smith commanding the Division.

November 26, it was assigned to garrison duty at Fort Pickering. While engaged in this line of duty, the men were attacked with small pox, measles, pneumonia and other diseases, and it kept the well busy, caring for the sick and burying the dead. As high as seven persons died out of Company D in one week, and the mortality was not much less in other companies.

From Fort Pickering the Regiment was assigned to provost duty in Memphis for a few days and then it took charge of the United States Navy Yard, and to picket Wolfe River from its mouth for a mile and a half.

About the 13th of January, 1863, the Eighth Wisconsin, Ninth Minnesota, and the One Hundred and Twentieth, under Colonel Wilcox of the Ninth Minnesota, was transported to Hopedale, Ark., from there we marched about fifteen miles during the night, striking a rebel recruiting camp near Marion, Ark., a little after sun up, capturing a lieutenant and twenty men on picket. A brisk skirmish followed in which the enemy was soon routed. Company E, of the One Hundred and Twentieth, captured two pet bears belonging to the enemy. After completely destroying the camp the command returned to Memphis, where the One Hundred and Twentieth resumed provost and garrison duty.

On March 30, the Regiment was moved to the foot of "Popular" street on the east side of the city, where it remained until May, when it was ordered to Vicksburg. On the way down the Mississippi, the transports conveying the Regiment were repeatedly fired into by guerrillas from either side of the river. Near Gainesville they killed Thomas Sanders, of Company D, and wounded nineteen others. We returned the fire with three volleys and had the satisfaction of learning from a gunboat captain that we had killed eight of the guerrillas. The Regiment landed at Young's Point and remained there about a week, when it marched across the point to "Hard-times," where we bivouacked for the night, crossing the Mississippi next morning in the Silver Wave to Warrenton and thence marched to the position assigned us under the sharp nose of "Whistling Dick," whose peculiar shrill whistling noise kept the boys awake and dodging both day and night.

On June 29, General Dick Taylor, with a force estimated at 5,000 to 6,000, came marching through Louisiana, routing the negroes and burning everything in his path, with the view of relieving General Pemberton, but our forces remained firm around the besieged city.

On the 2d of July the One Hundred and Twentieth and two other regiments were sent across to Young's Point and embarked on transports with others to report to General Reid, at Lake Providence, who was hourly expecting an attack from General Taylor. It was a race between the steamboats and General Taylor as to who would get there first, but we reached there about an hour first, just in time to prevent his contemplated attack, and had the pleasure of seeing him and his troops pass in review about a mile from us. His force was too — strong and saucy for General Reid to feel at ease, and all the infantry had to stand in line, elbow to elbow, all night around little "Fort Reid." The night was inky dark, but was frequently lit up by the flames of some house or negro quarters, set on fire by General Taylor's rear guard. It was estimated at the time that this raid of Taylor's drove over 4,000 negroes and poor whites into Lake Providence within twenty-four hours.

These poor, houseless people prayed all night long behind "Fort Reid," at the top of their voices, for "Massa" Abraham Lincoln and General Grant.

At day-light the One Hundred and Twentieth was ordered on board of a steamer and sent down the river to assist and succor the helpless. We soon came in sight of a fine mansion and out-houses on fire. The boat rounded-to, and had scarcely touched the shore before every man of the One Hundred and Twentieth was on a full run to the fire. As we passed through the lawn going to the house we found several women, children and nurses, crying and wringing their hands. The great anxiety seemed to be to save the "Judge's Law Books!" "What Judge?" said one of our officers. "Judge Dent Grant's father-in-law," was the reply. This naturally urged the men to extra duty, and it was not long before we had the Judge's fine library safely stacked near his wife. We were too late, however, to save either the mansion or other buildings. Mrs. Judge Dent thanked us most cordially for the service we had rendered, and gave us all the magazines, novels and newspapers we could carry when we returned to "Fort Reid."

On the 28th of July we were ordered to Lagrange, Tenn., arriving there August 2, but when General Forrest made his memorable raid upon Memphis, the Regiment was called back to the defense of the city.

On October 10 our Brigade, under command of Colonel George W. McKeaig, joined General Sweeney at Lagrange, when we made a ten days' scout into Mississippi with the entire force. At Cold Water and Davis' Mills our cavalry routed the enemy before the infantry arrived. The One Hundred and Twentieth returned to Memphis about the 21st of October.

On the 30th of October the Regiment was sent as a guard to 75 six-mule teams to Corinth, arriving there November 2 with everything intact. Turning the teams over to General Dodge, we returned to Memphis by rail on the 4th of November.

On the 7th of November we returned to Corinth, where the Regiment remained until the evacuation of the place, on January 25, 1864, by the Union forces.

From Corinth we returned to Memphis, where we were again assigned to provost duty.

In May we were brigaded with the Eighty-first, Ninety-fifth and One Hundred and Thirteenth Illinois, with Colonel George B. Hoge commanding.

On May 30th General Hurlburt ordered the Brigade to report to General Sturgis, and on the first of June it took up its line of march through rain, mud and heat for ten days. Our cavalry struck General Forrest's whole command near Guntown, Miss. General Grierson's cavalry brought on the engagement, but was forced back, though holding the enemy's advance partially in check. General Sturgis forced the infantry on a double quick for fully four miles to the assistance of Grierson. The day was one of excessive heat, and the men were already worn out; many had been sunstruck before the order came to move. The consequence was, that those who got to the battle were out of breath, and many of the officers could not give an intelligent command. In this exhausted condition they were rushed into the fight against double their number of rested troops on ground of their own choosing. After six hours of hard fighting our forces were over-powered and were compelled to retreat in great disorder. The One Hundred and Twentieth Illinois (under command of Colonel McKeaig) and the Ninth Minnesota (under Colonel Wilcox) maintained perfect discipline, and contested every foot of ground with the rebel advance from Guntown to Ripley. Here these brave colonels determined to make a desperate effort to protect the rear of our army, but the rebels came pell-mell on to the valiant little band, and in the second volley Colonel McKeaig was shot in the breast and arm, and falling from his horse, was captured by Colonel Jesse Forrest, who took care of him personally until he was exchanged.

From Ripley the retreat of the rear guard was divided into three divisions: one under Colonel Wilcox, one under Major S. B. Floyd. Each had about 150 men and retreated on different roads; but they brought their little commands safely into Memphis after a retreat of 90 miles, and all the while hardly pressed by the enemy's cavalry. But Adjutant McMurtry became separated from the command, and did not get in until the 22d of June, six days after the last of the troops had gotten into camp. He was eleven days alone, and most of the time without anything to eat.

After this fight the One Hundred and Thirteenth Illinois was consolidated with the One Hundred and Twentieth. On September 30th we embarked on the steamer Belle of Memphis, with General C. C. Washburn on board, and steamed up the river to Cairo, arriving there October 1st.

The next morning we took passage on the steamer Aurora for Padueah, arriving there October 3d; moved thence up the Tennessee River. On the 6th of October we debarked at Clifton and were ordered to prepare for a five days' march. At 3 P. M. we started in the direction of Nashville under command of General Washburn. We returned to Clifton on the 5th of October, and boarded our transports and moved up the Tennessee River with the view of intercepting Forrest. Without reconnoissance, our troops went ashore near Florence, Ala., to eat their dinners; but hardly had the One Hundred and Twentieth gotten ready to refresh the inner man, before the rebels opened fire upon them from a battery which had been planted on the brow of a bluff just over their heads.

We were ordered back on the transports, when the gunboats opened fire on the enemy, which was kept up until the transports were disabled. Then we were at the mercy of the stream. The boats drifted down the river for about three miles, when we were towed by the gunboats below Pittsburg Landing, which place we reached October 10th. On the 11th, the machinery of the transports having been repaired, we moved to Johnsonville, where we remained ten days awaiting orders. On the 21st of October we boarded the City of Pekin for Memphis, arriving there October 23d, and were again placed on provost duty, in which service we remained until we were mustered out of the service, which took place September 7th, 1865, when we were ordered to Camp Butler, where we received final payment and discharge September 10th.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SECOND INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment of Illinois Infantry Volunteers, was organized at Camp Palmer, Carlinville, Ill., in August, 1862, by Colonel John I. Rinaker, and was mustered into the service of the United States September 4, 1862, with 960 enlisted men.

The Regiment remained in camp and was drilled until October 8, and was then ordered and moved to Columbus, Ky. Upon its arrival at that post, it was ordered to go at once to Trenton, Tenn., and report to General G. M. Dodge. The Regiment arrived at Trenton, Tenn., October 12, and relieved the First Kansas Infantry, Colonel George W. Deitzler. Colonel Rinaker was assigned to the command of the post, and troops at that place, consisting of the One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois Infantry, Seventh Tennessee Cavalry, Colonel Isaac R. Hawkins commanding; Fourth Illinois Cavalry, and Captain Sparstroms Battery, Second Illinois Artillery.

The Regiment continued on duty at Trenton till the 12th of November, 1862, when Colonel Rinaker was ordered to take the right wing of the Regiment and proceed to Humboldt, Tenn., and relieve the Eighty-first Illinois Infantry, and to take command of the post and troops remaining there, consisting of four companies: Fifty-fourth Illinois Infantry, a part of Fourth Illinois Cavalry, Seventh Wisconsin Battery. This order was at once executed. The remainder of the Regiment was left at Trenton under command of Lieutenant Colonel J. F. Drish.

The force at Humboldt was to hold the Ohio and Mobile Railroad from Trenton to Jackson, Tenn., and guard the ordnance, commissary and quartermaster's supplies stored at that place.

This service was performed until the 18th of December, when the Regiment moved to Jackson, Tenn., to aid in defense of that place against an impending attack thereon by heavy forces of cavalry under Forrest. From Jackson, the One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment, with the Forty-third and Sixty-first Illinois, moved out on the 19th of December, and had a skirmish with the enemy that day and moved on out to Lexington, Tenn., and returned to Jackson on the 21st of December.

Thence moved to Trenton on the 23d of December, and the same night marched in obedience to orders to a point near Humboldt, to protect a force repairing Ohio and Mobile Railroad, which had just been destroyed by rebel cavalry. During the time that the Regiment had been about Jackson, the rebel cavalry under Forrest had captured the hospital at Trenton, and had made prisoners of the sick and the guards on duty at Trenton, by which the One Hundred and Twenty-second for the time being lost Major James F. Chapman and Captain B. Cowan, W. W. Freeman, Regimental Quartermaster, and 60 enlisted men taken prisoners.

On the 27th of December, 1862, nine companies of the One Hundred and Twenty-second, nine companies of Thirty-ninth Iowa Infantry, Fiftieth Indiana Infantry, and a part of Seventh Wisconsin Battery, with three pieces of artillery, and 40 men of Eighteenth Illinois Infantry, the latter mounted, whole under command of Colonel Cyrus L. Dunham, Fiftieth Indiana, marched from Trenton to head off the cavalry force under Forrest then moving back from near Columbus, Ky., toward the Tennessee River. Moved by way of Huntington, Tenn., and on the 30th of December a skirmish occurred with the enemy, and on the 31st of December, 1862, at about 11 A. M., the One Hundred and Twenty-second and Fiftieth Indiana and the 40 men of the Eighteenth Illinois Infantry, and a part of the Seventh Wisconsin Battery, constituting a force of 1,540 men, engaged in battle with the enemy under Forrest, numbering over 6,000 men with eighteen pieces of artillery. The fight continued till about 2 o'clock P. M., when the enemy fell back leaving the field in possession of the little force that had fought them for nearly three hours, and had during that time captured eight pieces of artillery and 500 prisoners, among them Major Strange, Forrest's Adjutant General. The loss of the One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment in killed were 22 enlisted men and 1 officer, Lieutenant Bristow, in wounded 56 enlisted men and 2 officers Colonel Rinaker and Captain William B. Dugger; one man missing, making a total loss of 80 men.

On the 3d of January, 1863, the Regiment returned to Trenton, Tenn., and remained there on duty till February 17, when it moved to Corinth, Miss., and was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, Colonel Mersey, of Ninth Illinois, commanding Brigade, General Sweeney commanding Division; General Dodge commanding left wing of the Sixteenth Corps. The Brigade was composed of Ninth, Twelfth, Sixty-sixth and One Hundred and Twenty-second Illinois, and Eighty-first Ohio Infantry.

From April 15 to 25, the Regiment took part in expedition to Town Creek, Ala., and was engaged with a rebel force at Town Creek. The Regiment was there commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Drish. June 25, Mersey's Brigade was put in charge of Memphis and Charleston Railroad, from Corinth to Grand Junction. The One Hundred and Twenty-second had that part from Middleton, Tenn., to Grand Junction; headquarters of the One Hundred and Twenty-second at Saulsbury, Tenn. During the ensuing months till the 30th of October, 1863, the men were constantly on duty and often engaged in skirmishes with cavalry forces of the enemy threatening the railroad.

Colonel Rinaker was in command of the post at Saulsbury and of the forces at that post, consisting of a part of One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment, the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry and the Seventh Tennessee Cavalry. On October 30, the Regiment moved from Saulsbury to Corinth, thence on the 1st of November, to Iuka, Miss. Colonel Rinaker was assigned to the command of post.

On November 5, the Regiment moved with the rest of the right wing, Sixteenth Corps, to Eastport, Miss. At that point the One Hundred and Twenty-second was left in charge of that place. A depot of supplies was established there. Colonel Rinaker was assigned to the command of the post and troops, consisting of the First New Jersey Cavalry, Thirty-fourth and Thirty-fifth New Jersey Infantry, and Seventeenth and One Hundred and Seventy-eighth New York Regiment of Infantry. The Regiment remained at Eastport till December 8, 1863, when it moved to Paducah, Ky., and thence on the 19th of January, 1864, to Cairo, Ill., Colonel Rinaker being assigned to the command of the post. On the 24th of March, 1864, a considerable rebel force under Forrest attacked Paducah, Ky., and three companies of the One Hundred and Twenty-second, E, H and K, took part in the defense, and aided in repelling the enemy in the three several assaults they made on Fort Anderson at that place.

June 26, 1864, the Regiment after the defeat of Sturgis at Guntown, Miss., was ordered to join the command of General A. J. Smith, then at La Grange, Tenn. Smith's command at that time was the right wing of the Sixteenth Corps. The Regiment proceeded via Memphis, Tenn., and on the 3d of July, 1864, reported to General A. J. Smith at La Grange, and was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division.

On the 4th of July, the command started on the march for Okalona, Miss., for the purpose of attacking the force then concentrating at that place under the command of Lieutenant General S. D. Lee, of the Confederate army. Cavalry skirmishing took place every day. The march was long, toilsome, the weather was hot; many cases of sun stroke occurred.

On the 11th the command reached Pontotoc, Miss., remained there till the 13th. Then the Regiment with the rest of the command marched to the village of Tupelo, and thus turned the right flank of the fortified position of the rebels in front of Okalona, compelling them to come out and attack us at Tupelo. On the 14th of July, about 9 o'clock A. M., the enemy, under General S. D. Lee, came forward in fine style and attacked General Smith's command posted in the rear of a crest of a ridge fronted by an open field, across which the rebels had to come. The One Hundred and Twenty-second was stationed with its right just covering the road leading into Tupelo. As the enemy advanced across the open plain, covered by a heavy artillery fire, the One Hundred and Twenty-second and the rest of the Brigade moved forward from the opposite side, and met the enemy just at the crest of the ridge, and opened a destructive fire upon them with such effect that their ranks were shattered and the whole force driven back with heavy loss in men and officers. Three times the assault was repeated and repulsed with equally disastrous results to the rebel force. At about 2 P. M., the enemy discomfited, withdrew, leaving the Union forces masters of the field, and in possession of the rebel dead. The loss of the One Hundred and Twenty-second were 10 killed and 33 wounded. Among the killed was Captain Burrough, of Company K. Lieutenant J. M. Valentine, of Company A, was severely wounded.

The Regiment with the rest of the command returned to Memphis on the 23d of July, 1864.

Again on the 4th of August the Regiment marched from Memphis, with the rest of General Smith's command, for Holly Springs, where after being detained a few days, the force moved on to Oxford, Miss. Near Abbyville they had a skirmish with the enemy without serious results to the Regiment. Reached Oxford only to find that the enemy had fallen back still farther.

Thence marched back to Memphis, reaching there on the 31st of August.

On the 8th of September, took boats for Cairo, Ill. Thence to Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Thence marched to Ironton, Mo., to meet a rebel force under General Sterling Price. The foxy old fellow turned aside and we had to return, and thence march into Western Missouri in the vain attempt to meet the same rebel force. This march covered the distance of 700 miles going and returning to and from the vicinity of Kansas City. The weather was much of the time during the march, cold, and the ground rough and frozen, the shoes of the men worn out and much severe suffering was endured.

Upon the return of the command to St. Louis on the 18th of November, 1864, the men were supplied with new shoes and clothing. Then the command of General A. J. Smith was ordered to go to the defense of Nashville, Tenn. This command then consisted of three Divisions of Infantry, and was called the "Detachment Army of the Tennessee." The One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment proceeded to Nashville, where, on the 15th and 16th of December, 1864, it took part in the battle of Nashville, capturing four pieces of artillery and a battle flag from the enemy; and losing in killed and wounded 26 men. The conduct of the Regiment in this battle was commended specially in the report of General Garrard, the Division commander. The Regiment was commanded in the battle by Lieutenant Colonel James F. Drish. The Regiment took part in the pursuit of General Hood's Army from Nashville to Eastport, Miss.

Thence on the 18th of February with residue of the Detachment of the Army of the Tennessee, under General A. J. Smith, proceeded to New Orleans, La., arriving there on the — of February. At that place other troops were added to the command, and it became thenceforth the Sixteenth Corps, Army of the Tennessee.

On the 6th of March the One Hundred and Twenty-second Regiment with the One Hundred and Nineteenth Illinois, Twenty-first Missouri Infantry, Eighty-ninth Indiana, constituting First Brigade, Second Division, Sixteenth Army Corps, and Fifty-eighth Illinois, under command of Colonel Rinaker, went by ocean steamer to Dauphine Islands, near mouth of Mobile Bay.

On the 23d of March, moved thence with the rest of the Sixteenth Corps to assist in the investment of rebel fortifications at Blakely and Spanish Fort, these constituting the eastern defenses of Mobile. And on the 9th of April, 1865, it occupied the center of the line formed by the First Brigade, General Garrard's Division, Sixteenth Corps of the Army of the Tennessee, in the assault upon the rebel works at Blakely, and materially aided in capturing that place. The Brigade captured 10 pieces of artillery and the rebel General's headquarters, a number of rebel flags, and several hundreds of prisoners, among them Generals Liddell and Thomas and their staff officers. The Regiment was commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Drish, who was seriously wounded by a piece of shell. The loss of the Regiment was 20 men killed and wounded. Colonel Kinaker commanded the Brigade in the charge as he had done for a considerable time previous thereto. The Regiment with the rest of the Sixteenth Corps on the 12th of April, left Blakely and marched thence to Montgomery, Ala., arriving there on the 26th of that month.

On the 5th of June, the Regiment returned to Mobile, Ala., and on the 15th of July it was mustered out, and proceeded thence to Springfield, Ill., where it was paid off and finally discharged on the 4th of August, 1865.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-THIRD INFANTRY.

This Regiment was organized at Mattoon, Ill., by Colonel James Monroe (then Major of the Seventh Illinois Infantry). Companies A, C, D, H, I and K being from Coles county; B from Cumberland, E from Clark, F and G from Clark and Crawford. It was mustered into service at Camp Terry, Mattoon, September 6, 1862, with James Monroe as Colonel, Jonathan Biggs, of Westfield, Clark county, as Lieutenant Colonel, and James A. Connolly, of Charleston, Ill., as Major.

On the 19th of September, 1862, the Regiment was loaded into freight cars at Mattoon, and transported to Louisville, Ky., where it was at once put to work, under General Nelson, to fortify the city against Bragg, who was then advancing on it in pursuit of Buell.

October 1, having been assigned to the Thirty-third Brigade (General W. H. Terrill), Fourth Division (General James S. Jackson), in McCook's Corps, the Regiment started on the march under Buell, southward through Kentucky, after Bragg, who had turned back, and up to this time the Regiment never had battalion drill, and hardly an attempt at company drill, as all the officers, except the Colonel, were "raw recruits."

October 8, just nineteen days after leaving Mattoon, the Regiment was engaged in the battle of Perryville, where it lost 36 killed and 180 wounded. Among its wounded were Captain Coblenz, Company E, First Lieutenant S. M. Shepard, Company A, and Adjutant L. H. Hamlin. Its Brigade Commander, General Terrill, and its Division Commander, General Jackson, were both killed immediately behind and within twenty feet of the line of the Regiment.

October 12, moved through Danville, Ky., to the Kentucky River, thence back through Danville and Lebanon to Mumfordsville, Ky.

In November moved via Glasgow and Bledsoe's Creek to Castilian Springs.

December 26, marched in pursuit of John Morgan, to Glasgow and Bear Wallow.

January 2, 1863, abandoned the chase after Morgan, and under Colonel Hall, One Hundred and Fifth Ohio, commanding Brigade, marched to Cave City, Bowling Green and Nashville, Tenn., reaching Murfreesboro, Tenn., in General Gilbert's Corps, January 10.

February and March were spent in brigade and regimental scouting.

Early in March the Regiment was attacked beyond Stone River, while halted on Breed's Hill, with arms stacked and ranks broken, by a large cavalry force, but forming under fire, and repelling the attack, it waded Stone River, carrying off its wounded, and withdrew to Murfreesboro.

March 20, the Brigade, consisting of the One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois, Eightieth Illinois, One Hundred and Fifth Ohio, One Hundred and First Indiana, with two pieces of Captain Harris' Battery—about 1,500 men in all—was attacked and surrounded by Morgan's Cavalry, about 5,000 strong, with six pieces of artillery, near Milton, Tenn., about twelve miles out from Murfreesboro. This was shortly after Morgan had captured a Brigade of infantry at Hartsville, Tenn. In the engagement at Milton, Morgan was wounded, his force driven from the field, leaving their dead and wounded and two pieces of artillery. Captain A. C. VanBuskirk, Company H, was killed, and a number wounded.

Major Connolly had the pommel of his saddle torn away by a bullet, and dismounting, was in a few minutes knocked down and seriously injured by a bullet which carried away the collar of his overcoat and blouse. Dr. H. C. Allen, the Regimental Surgeon, had his blouse riddled with bullets while attending to the wounded. Morgan never fought a successful battle after this.

May 6 the Regiment was assigned to Wilder's Brigade, Reynolds' Division, Fourteenth Corps, composed of Seventeenth and Seventy-second Indiana, and Ninety-eighth and One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois. They were mounted, and armed with Spencer rifles—seven shooters. Did scouting and patrol duty for a month or so.

June 24 this Brigade led the advance of Rosecrans' army in its movement from Murfreesboro, the Seventeenth Indiana being in advance and the One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois next. These two Regiments moved out from Murfreesboro long before daylight on the morning of the 24th, in a drenching rain, and by daylight encountered the rebel videttes. From that moment the two Regiments broke into a gallop and kept up the run. The farther they went the larger the rebel force of cavalry kept growing before them, but the rapid pace gave the enemy no time to form, until about 9 o'clock in the morning, by which time these two Regiments had advanced to and seized Hoover's Gap, a place of great natural strength, but they were confronted here with twenty times their own number of infantry, well supplied with artillery to occupy this Gap, and their supporting forces were at least ten miles in the rear, floundering along through the mud and rain. But the rapidity and audacity of the movement saved them, for the enemy, supposing the force was a large one, checked there advance in column, deployed there force in two lines, brought up there artillery and opened a terrific artillery fire, at the same time sending out reconnoitering parties on the Federal flanks, but as soon as the gap was seized, couriers had been despatched back to Wilder, informing him of the situation, and before the enemy had satisfied himself of the force in his front, the other Regiments of the Brigade arrived, and with it the battery of Captain Lilly, (Indiana) his guns having been hauled the last mile by men of the Brigade, Lilly's horses having given out with their long run through the muddy roads.

These reinforcements checked the enemy still more, but by 2 P. M. they made a determined attack along the whole line and on both flanks, but the seven shooting Spencer rifles proved effective in repelling it, and before another could be made the head of the infantry of Rosecrans' army began to arrive, and Hoover's Gap was held without further contest, the enemy withdrawing in the night. The Regiment lost several killed and wounded in this affair.

June 26 to August 16, raiding to the rear of Bragg's army, cutting and tearing up railroads, and burning bridges in his rear; capturing horses and contrabands in the vicinity of Manchester, War Trace, Shelbyville, Columbia, Centerville, Pulaski and Decherd.

August 16, moved eastward from Decherd, over Cumberland Mountains and Walden's Ridge, reaching the valley on the east side of the Ridge, at Poe's tavern, about 10 o'clock at night, and there bivouacing until 3 o'clock in the morning, when Major Connolly, of the One Hundred and Twenty-third, was ordered to move down the valley with two companies of his regiment, and, moving cautiously and without noise, to go as far down the valley as he could. This battalion moved on at smart pace and noiselessly over the sandy road, until about 6 o'clock in the morning, when, upon making a turn in the road, the battalion suddenly found itself within 100 yards of the Tennessee River, and looking right up the main street of the city, while the high fortified hill, on the Chattanooga side, with its many guns, frowned immediately over the heads of the men of the battalion, but there was a steamboat lying at the bank on the north side of the river, just where the road they were traveling reached the water, which had just unloaded 60 mules and twelve rebel soldiers, who were bringing the mules out to pasture. In an instant the battalion was flying down the road to that steamboat, the mules and soldiers were captured, and the Spencer rifles began firing into the boat, which dropped its gang plank into the river, and backed out from the bank, drifting down with the current, as the helmsman was compelled to desert his wheel. In the excitement of the attack some of the men rode their horses belly-deep into the river, in their eager desire to capture the boat. The enemy in the city were completely surprised; they didn't know there was a Federal soldier within 100 miles of the city, so the little battalion stood there and fired across into the streets at every rebel uniform that showed itself dodging about the streets, for full ten minutes before a single shot was returned from the other side. Couriers were sent back to notify the Brigade Commander, and, in a very short time, the rest of the Brigade, with Captain Lilly's battery, was on the hills opposite Chattanooga, and Lilly, with his rifled guns, soon found himself able to send his shells entirely over the city and to any part of it. The Regiment remained there with its Brigade, picketing the river for miles above and below Chattanooga, until Sept. 9, when Crittenden's Corps entered Chattanooga.

The Regiment then forded the river above Chattanooga, and led the advance of Crittenden's Corps to Ringgold and Tunnel Hill, Ga., constantly skirmishing during the three days advance.

September 18 and 19, engaged in the battle of Chickamauga, the Regiment taking its place in line with the infantry of the Fourteenth Corps, to which it belonged.

September 20, the Regiment remounted and moved with its Brigade back through Chattanooga, and, crossing the river, moved up to Fryer's Island.

Sergeant Major R. W. Houghton was killed, and Captain W. E. Adams, Company I, was wounded at Chickamauga.

September 24, Major Connolly was detailed to serve as Inspector of the Third Division, Fourteenth Corps (General Reynolds) and, on the reorganization of the army, the Divisions of Reynolds and Brannan were consolidated under command of Baird, and Major Connolly, from that time until the close of the war, served as inspector of this consolidated Division, engaging in the siege of Chattanooga, battles of Lookout Mountain, Mission Ridge, Ringgold, Resaca, Atlanta Campaign, Sherman's march to Savannah and through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington.

October 1 the Regiment started up the river under General Cook to intercept Wheeler in his raid toward Nashville.

October 7 engaged in the battle at Farmington, Tenn., in which Wheeler was severely punished and driven from the State, and where Colonel James Monroe was killed. Sergeant Catlin and Corporal Shope were killed also, and many others wounded.

Followed Wheeler and drove him across the Tennessee River.

October 19 went into camp at Maysville, Ala., and spent some two months there patrolling the surrounding country and collecting horses, thence to Pulaski, Tenn., where two or three weeks were spent in shelter tents, with snow a foot deep and zero weather. Thence to Mooresville, Ala., about the middle of January, 1864, and guarded the Tennessee River, gathering rations and forage in northern Alabama until April; then marched to Columbia, Tenn., remaining there a few weeks; then started to join General Sherman for the Atlanta campaign, passing through Stevenson, Ala., May 6, and camping at foot of Sand Mountain, 7 miles from Bridgeport.

Moved over Sand Mountain through Trenton into Georgia, in Lookout Valley; thence over Lookout Mountain to Chickamauga Creek May 8; thence via Pigeon Gap to Lafayette, across Taylor's Ridge to Villenow, 15 miles from Dalton, and fell in with the army May 11.

May 14 moved towards Rome, Ga., with Sherman's Cavalry, but the Cavalry encountered Forrest's Cavalry and Polk's Infantry Corps and retreated, this Regiment being on foot and covering the retreat, wherein their Spencer rifles came into good play.

May 16, at 3 o'clock P. M., started for the front of Sherman's Army, passing on the way the Division of Jeff. C. Davis, en route for Rome, Ga., and at 1 o'clock next morning camped on battle field where Logan's Corps fought for the crossing of the Oostenaule River.

May 17, turned again and moved 18 miles toward Rome. May 18, continued toward Rome, turned toward Kingston, Ga., and at Woodland ran into a rebel force where Adjutant Hamlin was captured.

May 19 the Regiment moved to Rome, the rest of the Brigade going to Kingston, where the Regiment rejoined it the same night.

May 20 the entire Brigade and Garrard's Division of Cavalry behind fortifications at High Tower Bridge.

May 21 Captain O. F. Bane detailed as Adjutant General of Brigade, and Lieutenant J. R. Harding relieved as Provost Marshal of Brigade, and detailed as Regimental Adjutant.

May 23 moved 15 miles southwest to VanWert.

May 24 crossed Allatoona Mountains into valley at Dallas and overtook rear guard of Johnston's army, skirmishing heavily with them.

May 25 moved out of bivouac into line of battle on foot and held line under heavy fire until Logan's Corps came up, when mounting, moved to right flank.

May 27 dismounted behind rail piles on extreme right of army, skirmishing all day; repulsed several charges. By this time the men had acquired so much confidence in their Spencer rifles that the single rank formation for line of battle was much better than the double rank used to be with the muzzle loaders.

May 29, changed position during night to extreme left of army.

June 1, Regiment reported to General McPherson, and went into picket southwest of Dallas, on extreme right of army again; constant skirmishing. Covered movement of right wing in changing lines to rear.

June 8, on extreme left of army, at Ackworth, June 9, with Division, reconnoissance to Big Shanty, driving enemy into their earthworks at foot of Kenesaw mountain. Four men of Regiment wounded on skirmish line. June 10, moved four miles to left of Big Shanty, holding left of army; fortified along Noonday Creek.

June 19, moved with the Brigade out of fortifications, and drove the enemy beyond the creek into their fortifications. On 20th, another similar advance, with heavy skirmishing, resulting as before.

June 22, made a forty-mile scout eastward to Canton and back, halting at noon on Governor Joe Brown's farm. June 23, Regiment moved with Garrard's Division of Cavalry across Noonday Creek. Daily skirmishing until July 2d, when the Regiment covered the withdrawal of McPherson's Corps again, preparatory to a change of front.

July 3, followed the retiring enemy through Marietta, Ga.

July 4, 1864, skirmishing nearly all day with the enemy, between Marietta and the Chattahoochie, with the Chicago Board of Trade Battery well up to the skirmish line all the time.

July 5, moved toward Roswell, Ga. July 9, waded the Chattahoochie River at Roswell, under fire of enemy from opposite bank, and lay all day on south bank, after driving the enemy away, as cover for the crossing of our troops, wading back at night to horses and bed. July 15, Lieutenant Colonel Biggs led the Regiment, together with the Seventy-second Indiana and Seventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, to Cross Keys, within thirteen miles of Atlanta. July 18, destroyed railroad between Decatur and Stone Mountain Station, and on 19th captured Stone Mountain Station. On 20th moved to Decatur. 22d and 23d of July, on a raid to Oxford and Covington, Ga.

On the night of July 27 Garrard's Division of Cavalry, with which the Regiment was serving, was completely surrounded by a large force of the enemy, and the Regiment was dismounted, and forming as infantry, led the advance in cutting through the lines of the enemy on the Atlanta road, on the morning of July 28. Captain Hart, Company D, was wounded here.

August 1, the Regiment and the rest of the Brigade returned to Atlanta front, and leaving horses at Peach Tree Creek, in charge of the "No. 4" men, moved into the line of our works on extreme left, which the Twenty-third Corps had vacated during the night, and continued to hold them until the 13th, when moved to Decatur. 17th in camp on Buck Head road. 19th and 20th, at Decatur, patrolling, skirmishing and foraging in rear of Atlanta until night of 20th, when the Regiment traveled and picketed all night for the left wing of the army as it withdrew to the Chattahoochie River.

August 29, moved to right of the army with the Brigade, and on 30th covered movement of army trains, and reached Montgomery railroad. On 30th moved to right near to Macon railroad, which Scotfield was destroying at Rough-and-Ready.

September 2 reconnoitred in rear of Atlanta, which was taken possession of by Slocum, and Atlanta campaign ended, the Regiment having marched as cavalry and fought as infantry all through it.

October 1st at Cross Keys. October 3d, crossed the Chattahoochee on pontoons, going northward in pursuit of Hood. October 5th, followed Hood to Lost Mountain, the Fourth Corps being to the right and the Fourteenth Corps to the left. October 7th, fought the enemy at New Hope Church, we occupying their old works and they occupying ours. October 11th, reached Rome, and on 12th engaged enemy, driving him three or four miles from Rome in direction of Summerville. 13th, moved out on old Atlanta road and scattered enemy's cavalry over the country. 14th, moved on Kingston road. October 20th, came up with Hood at Little River, and spent day in heavy skirmishing, being then in Alabama. 21st, struck enemy again at Blue Pond.

October 23d, moved over Lookout Mountain into Wills Valley, Hood's army having left Gadsden, Ala., for the Tennessee River. October 28th, struck the enemy at Terrapin Creek. General J. H. Wilson assumed command of the Division to which the Regiment was attached, and which was commanded by General Garrard during all the Atlanta campaign and up to this date.

October 30th, reached Cave Springs, and next day reached Rome. November 1st, turned over all serviceable horses and mules to General Kilpatrick, and went to Louisville, Ky., to remount for the "Wilson Raid" of the next spring.

December 28th, 1864, left Louisville, Ky., remounted and equipped.

January 1st, 1865, camped at Elizabethtown, Ky., with snow a foot deep and weather very cold. January 9th, 10th and 11th, at Nashville, Tenn. Moved thence via Columbia and Mt. Pleasant to Gravelly Springs, Ala., near Eastport.

March 22d, 1865, started from there with First, Second and Fourth Divisions of cavalry, 12,000 men, under General Wilson, for Selma, Ala. 23d March, reached Frankfort, and 24th crossed Bear Creek. March 26th, reached Blackwater River, and on 29th reached Black Warrior, whose waters flow directly to the Gulf. March 30th, marched through Eliton and camped 11 miles below, having marched 30 miles this day. March 31st, moved down the railroad toward Selma, destroying bridges, trestlework, depots and Confederate machine shops at Limestone Station. Montevallo was captured after sharp fighting, and burned.

April 1st, rebels sent reinforcements up from Selma and made a determined stand at Ebenezer Church, but they were forced back with but little fighting. April 2d, marched 21 miles, appearing before Selma's fortifications at two o'clock in the afternoon. Immediately the horses were sent to the rear, lines formed, and an assault commenced on the works by the mounted infantry Brigade with their Spencer rifles.

The assaulting column consisted of but little over 1,000 men, in single line, and with no reserve line. This column was composed of the Ninety-eighth and One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois and Seventeenth and Seventy-second Indiana, and when the command to charge was given they rushed forward under a deadly fire without check or waver until they climbed the fortifications and opened their deadly Spencer fire on the flying defenders of Selma. In this assault, First Lieutenant O. J. McManus, Sergeants J. S. Mullen and Henry E. Cross, Corporal McMurphy and privates Daniel Cook, John Bowman, Marion White and Henry Woodruff were killed, and 50 wounded, including Lieutenant Colonel Biggs, Adjutant L. B. Bane, Captains W. E. Adams and Owen Wiley, Lieutenants Alex. McNutt and J. R. Harding.

Forrest was defending the place with 8,000 men. He escaped, leaving 2,000 prisoners in our hands.

April 8th, marched for Montgomery, 45 miles away, wading swamps and creeks and pontooning Black Swan River, reaching the original capital of the Confederacy on April 13th, and there learning for the first time that Lee had surrendered to Grant in Virginia.

April 16th, reached Columbus, Ga., and on the 20th entered Macon, Ga., without opposition, at the end of a 43 miles march. May 23d, started for Chattanooga; from thence marched to Nashville and camped across the river at Edgefield, where the Regiment was mustered for discharge by Captain L. M. Hosea on June 27th, the recruits being transferred to the Sixty-first Illinois. Discharged at Springfield, Ill., July 11th, 1865. At the time of the death of Colonel Monroe, at Farmington, Tenn., in October, 1863, the Regiment was reduced below the minimum, and was never after filled up, so that the Lieutenant Colonel and Major came home with the same rank they went out with, except that the Lieutenant Colonel was brevetted Brigadier General, and the Major was brevetted Lieutenant Colonel by the President.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE TENNESSEE.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 5. } Extract.

NASHVILLE, TENN., June 28, 1865.

XXVII. Those men of the One Hundred and Twenty-third Illinois Volunteers who are ineligible to be mustered out with that command, now at Edgefield, Tenn., will proceed, without delay, to Franklin, Tenn., under charge of Lieutenant L. Grundy, Sixty-first Illinois. On arrival at Franklin, these men will be transferred to and permanently consolidated with the Sixty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry. Brevet Major A. L. Hough, Chief Commissary of Musters, M. D. T., is hereby charged with the execution of this order. The transfer to be made under provisions of Circular No. 64, series 1864, War Department.

By command of Major General Thomas.

HENRY M. CIST, A. A. G.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOURTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Illinois Infantry was a representative, self-raised Regiment, recruited from Henry, Kane, McDonough, Sangamon, Jersey, Adams, Wayne, Cook, Putnam, Pike, Mercer and Christian counties. August 27, 1862, the first company went into camp at Camp Butler, near Springfield. Six days later all were in camp, and the field officers chosen. September 10th it was mustered into the United States service for three years, by Lieutenant F. E. DeCoursey.

October 6th, left for the front which was found at Jackson, Tennessee, at 3 A. M. the 9th. Was assigned to the First Brigade, Third Division, Seventeenth Army Corps, consisting of the Twentieth, Thirty-first, Forty-fifth and One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Illinois and the Twenty-third Indiana, commanded by Colonel C. C. Marsh, of the Twentieth Illinois, General John A. Logan commanding the Division and General J. B. McPherson the Corps. With this organization the Regiment remained till April 5, 1864. In the crisp autumn air and lovely camp at Jackson the discipline and efficiency of the Regiment were rapidly developed and the foundations largely laid for all the distinction it afterwards achieved.

Left Jackson November 2d, to participate in the movement under General Grant, via Bolivar and Lagrange, Tennessee, and Holly Springs, Abbeville and Oxford, Mississippi, to the rear of Vicksburg. Returned from the Yacoma upon the burning of the depot of supplies at Holly Springs, and after some time spent in guarding the Memphis and Charleston railroad, reached Memphis January 21, 1863.

A month later was a part of the command which moved down the Mississippi to Lake Providence, Louisiana, General I. N. Haynie being then in command of the Brigade. After two months of inactivity was a part of the force moving from Milliken's Bend, April 25th, upon what proved to be the final Vicksburg campaign, General John E. Smith having succeeded General Haynie, who had gone home sick. April 30th, crossed the Mississippi from DeSchroon's plantation in Louisiana, to Bruinsburg in Mississippi, on the gunboat Mound City.

May 1st, after a rapid and hot march of about twelve miles, the Regiment received its first baptism of fire in bearing a part in the battle of Thompson's Hills, or Port Gibson. May 12th it bore an important part in the battle of Raymond, May 14th it was at the capture of Jackson and May 16th it did noble service at the battle of Champion Hills, capturing more men from the Forty-third Georgia, after killing its Colonel and Major, than its own ranks numbered. It also killed most of the men and horses of a battery, really capturing the guns. The loss of the Regiment in this action was sixty-three killed and wounded.

The morning of May 19th crossed the Big Black and moved on Vicksburg. Was in the fearful charge of May 22d, and occupied the extreme advance position gained that day, during the whole of the siege. It was just to the right of the Jackson road, upon which and the covered way subsequently dug, the left of the regiment rested, and is said to have been the nearest camp to the enemy's works. It was immediately in front of the fort which was mined—in large part by men of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth—and blown up June 25th and July 1st. At the first explosion the Regiment lost forty-nine men in killed and wounded in what was called the "Slaughter Pen," being ordered into the crater formed by the explosion, two companies at a time for half an hour, all day of the 26th.

General Smith having been assigned to the command of a Division, General M. D. Leggett, formerly Colonel of the Seventy-eighth Ohio, assumed command of the First Brigade, June 2d.

On the 4th of July the Regiment shared with the First Brigade in the honor of first entering the captured city and helping to swell the shout that arose as the Forty-fifth Illinois ran out its colors from the cupola of the court house.

From August 21 to September 2, was absent on an expedition to Monroe, La., under General J. D. Stevenson, General Logan being in command of the Post of Vicksburg.

From October 14 to 20, was absent on an expedition in force against Loring, Wirt Adams and others to Brownsville and the Bogue Chitto Creek. Skirmished considerable but the enemy retreated.

November 7 the Brigade broke camp in Vicksburg, where its camp had been since the surrender, and removed to Big Black, 14 miles east. The 13th, General Logan took his farewell of his old fighting Third Division, to the regret of all, and was subsequently succeeded by General Leggett, the First Brigade being commanded by General M. F. Force. In December Colonel Sloan was dismissed the service, and Lieutenant Colonel J. H. Howe subsequently commanded the Regiment.

January, 1864, was rendered memorable in the history of the Regiment by its winning an "Excelsior" prize banner, which General Leggett signalized his assuming command by tendering to the best drilled and finest Regiment in the Division. The three Brigades drilled separately, on the 20th of January the First Brigade, the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth winning; on the 21st the Second Brigade, the Seventy-eighth Ohio winning; on the 22d the Third Brigade, the Seventeenth Illinois winning. On the 23d the three victorious regiments drilled, and the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth won handsomely, the award being unanimous by the committee. General McPherson presented the banner. The Regiment bore the banner in triumph till the 5th of April following, including the famous Meridian raid under General Sherman from February 3 to March 4, or upwards of 300 miles marching in the face of the enemy, and much of the time under fire, proving by its good behaviour and bravery in the field, as well as by its bearing upon drill and parade, its right to the proud distinction of being the "Excelsior" Regiment of the noble Third Division. April 5, through a reorganization effected in veteranizing, the Regiment found itself outside of the Third Division, to which the banner was to belong, according to the terms understood in drilling for it, and so surrendered the proud trophy to Colonel Scott, temporarily commanding the Division. But the banner was never afterwards borne by any command. The One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Illinois was the only "Excelsior" Regiment of that famous old Division.

The 5th of April, 1864, the Regiment moved to Vicksburg again, where its camp remained till February 25, 1865. Much of that time was passed on provost duty, from which a little relief was found in an expedition of eighteen days in May, under General McArthur, to Benton and Yazoo City, and one of nine days in July, under General Slocum, to Jackson, in both of which some considerable service was seen and loss sustained.

October 13 it went up the river, ultimately as far as Memphis. But nothing noteworthy occurred, and the 26th found it back in camp and on provost duty again.

February 25, 1865, after a stay in Vicksburg and vicinity of nearly two years, found the Regiment on the steamer Grey Eagle, bound for New Orleans with orders to report to General Canby. This was done the 27th, and followed by other orders to report to General A. J. Smith, below the city, for duty in the field.

March 11 embarked on the steamship Guiding Star, and March 16 debarked at Fort Gaines, on Dauphine Island, Ala.

Were assigned with the Eighty-first and One Hundred and Eighth Illinois and the Eighth Iowa, to the Third Brigade, Colonel J. L. Geddes, of the Eighth Iowa commanding, of the Third Division, commanded by General E. A. Carr, of the Sixteenth Army Corps, under General A. J. Smith; moving with the Thirteenth Army Corps, commanded by General Gordon Granger and a force under General F. Steele, against the defenses of Mobile, all under command of General E. R. S. Canby.

March 21 crossed the bay, and on the 22d debarked on Fish River and moved on Spanish Fort. Shared actively in the investment on the 27th and the siege which followed, the Third Brigade constituting the extreme right of the investing line, and being exposed not only to the direct fire from the enemy's works in front, but to an enfilading fire from batteries Huger and Tracy, and gunboats in the river above. Bore a conspicuous part in the brilliant attack on the enemy's extreme left on the night of April 8, which terminated the siege, was among the first to enter the works, captured several guns and many prisoners, swept up to the Old Fort in the darkness, reaching it before midnight, and was shelled by the Union fleet before the change of occupation was known.

Started for Montgomery, Ala., April 13, reaching it on the 25th, and going immediately upon provost duty, Colonel Geddes commanding Post, and Colonel Howe the Brigade.

The 16th of July left for home via the Alabama River and railroad to Vicksburg, passing through Meridian, Jackson, the battle ground of Champion Hills, and the old camps on the Big Black. On the 28th of July left Vicksburg on the good steamer Ida Handy, and on the 3d of August reached Chicago in company with the Seventy-sixth Illinois, Colonel Busey commanding. On the 16th of August, eleven days less than three years since the first company went into camp at Springfield, the Regiment was mustered out at Camp Douglas.

Colonel Howe's history of the battle flag of the Regiment, stated that it had been borne 4,100 miles, in 14 skirmishes, 10 battles and 2 sieges of 47 days and nights, and 13 days and nights respectively, and so had been under fire eighty-two days and sixty nights; the distance not including that from Montgomery to Chicago.

The Regiment was one of the most fortunate in the service. It always obeyed orders, taking and holding every position to which it was assigned unflinchingly. Regiments by its side sustained fearful losses in officers and men while its numbers were comparatively intact. One officer alone was killed in the service, and he was sitting in his tent off duty when struck, at the siege of Vicksburg. Two others resigned from wounds, and two died. Twenty men were killed in action, twenty-nine died from wounds, five were captured when detailed on a scout, four of whom did not live to return, and one hundred and thirty-seven men died of disease. Very many others, officers and men, were wounded and some seriously, but they were not lost to the Regiment. The Regiment never was repulsed, never retreated a step in the face of a foe and never lost a prisoner in action.

The following from the pen of General M. D. Leggett, was written in January, 1886, and is thought worthy of a place in closing this history.

"As to the Excelsior Banner, it is due to the members of the old Third Division that I should tell them all I know about it. When we went into the Atlanta campaign we sent all our surplus and unnecessary baggage back to Nashville for storage, in order to lighten our transportation. With such baggage the Excelsior Banner went. At the time of the siege of Nashville, in December, 1864, this baggage had its location changed and was lost, but was not captured by the enemy. I caused an exhaustive search to be made for it in the spring of 1865, but without success. If I could have found this Excelsior Banner, I should have sent it to Colonel John H. Howe, of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Illinois. This was a splendid Regiment and splendidly officered, and deservedly earned the banner after a severe struggle. To be the best drilled and best disciplined Regiment in the old Third Division of the Seventeenth Corps, was honor enough. This was Logan's Division and McPherson's Corps up to the fall of Vicksburg, and no troops did more hard marching and hard fighting. It may be truthfully said of them, they were never driven from a position, and never attempted to take a position and failed.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIFTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Infantry was formed of good war material, mainly drawn from the rural precincts of Vermillion and Champaign counties, with a sprinkling of mechanics, professional and laboring men and clerks from the towns, practically all of whom could read and write, so that the war and its possible requirements were well comprehended by them before enlistment.

A brief rendezvous at Danville, the muster-in September 3, 1862, the equipment, the sad farewells, and the command moved to Cincinnati, thence across the Ohio to the heights above Covington on the "neutral" ground of Kentucky, where it relieved a provisional regiment of "squirrel hunters." Here the troops began their first military duties. Hitherto they had been provided for by kind and patriotic friends, now they were dependent on the army ration, to be eaten as cooked by novices in the culinary art. Here drill and dress parade, guard and picket duty, and a semblance of discipline, were imposed upon all. Here, too, that scourge of camp life, the measles, broke out and a large number were so disabled as to necessitate their discharge, others lingered in hospital and died, while a few so far recovered as to be returned to their command.

September 25, the Regiment was ordered to Louisville by transports, where it arrived after tedious delays on the night of the 27th. On the 28th it was put in Brigade with the Fifty-second Ohio, Eighty-fifth and Eighty-sixth Illinois, Colonel Daniel McCook of the Fifty-second Ohio commanding, which organization it maintained to the end of the service, with the addition, afterwards, of the Twenty-second Indiana and the One Hundred and Tenth Illinois.

October 1, Buell's pursuit of Bragg began. Overtaking him near Perryville on the 8th, there occurred the bloody battle of that name, and though not hotly engaged the Regiment had a splendid opportunity to witness the fierce struggle between others, get its first smell of hostile powder, and to observe the difference between the sharp, keen whistle of a minnie ball and the fierce shriek of shot and shell. Divided in two parts, it was all day supporting batteries, most of the time engaging the enemy. At near the close of the day the rebels made a desperate final charge on these batteries, but were handsomely repulsed by a strong line of infantry, and the Regiment was permitted to pursue flying fugitives, and swell the shouts of victory. 3

After Perryville, a meandering march took the Regiment to Nashville, Tenn., November 7, 1862, afterwards to Mill Creek, and then back again to Nashville about December 10, where it remained as a part of the post forces until August, 1863, doing the various duties incident to post service. In the meantime the Regiment having good opportunity became thoroughly drilled. Here too those who had temporarily broken down on the Kentucky Campaign, or were disabled from sickness and not discharged, were brought up, and by the time the command was required to leave Nashville it was in fine soldierly condition.

Forming a part of General Gordon Granger's reserve Corps, the Regiment left Nashville August 3, 1863, for the front, full of strength and hope and with commendable ardor for honorable service. Rosecrans' great army was in pursuit of Bragg and all available forces were to follow. The route of the Regiment took it through Franklin, Columbia, Athens, Huntsville, Bridgeport and over Lookout Mountain, to the battlefield of Chickamauga, where, on the morning of September 19, the whole Brigade came near being drawn in ambush and surrounded at Reed's bridge. On the 20th, with General Granger's Corps, supporting Thomas' left, the Regiment was under fire all of Sunday afternoon, and also on Monday at Rossville Gap.

Returning with the army to Chattanooga, and upon its subsequent reorganization, the Brigade was assigned to the Second Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps, commanded by General Jeff. C. Davis, and was ever afterwards designated as the Third Brigade, and thereafter took honorable part in all the marches, battles, skirmishes and sieges of that justly famous Corps, but want of space forbids an attempt to particularize.

The Regiment late in October, 1863, was encamped opposite the mouth of Chickamauga River and furnished daily details to guard Caldwell's Fort. About a week before the battle of Missionary Ridge, two or three rebel batteries were silently planted on the south bluff of the Tennessee and in excellent range of the Regimental camp. Just at daylight the next morning and as if designed as an accompaniment to reveille these batteries opened a terrific fire hurling their shells in the midst of about 600 sleepy half dressed soldiers, not yet accustomed to so peremptory an order to "get up." Their guns were soon silenced, however, by our own batteries, but not until they had killed the Regimental Chaplain, wounded others, and made good hiding places at a premium for a few minutes.

Crossing the Tennessee on Sherman's pontoon November 24, the Regiment engaged in the battle of Missionary Ridge November 25 and 26. Pursuing the enemy to Ringgold, Ga., it marched next day towards Knoxville to aid Burnside going as far as the Little Tennessee, and learning that the enemy had raised the siege and fled, the Regiment returned, December 18, to Chattanooga nearly barefoot and poorly clad, having accomplished a hard march in very severe weather.

February 24 and 25, engaged in a reconnoissance with the main body of the army to Buzzard Roost Gap in front of Dalton, and returning encamped at McAfee's Church and Lee and Gordons Mills until May 3, occupied mainly in preparing for the more brilliant and useful career still before it.

Thorough drill and wholesome discipline had given the troops a splendid morale but now their best powers of endurance and highest courage were to be put to their severest test. The Atlanta Campaign was to begin, with the destruction of the rebel army for its objective point.

Sherman put the Union forces in motion May 3, and the enemy's resistance began at once. The Confederates under Johnson had a leader of such matchless skill that he was not likely to leave any vantage ground for a direct attack, and from Dalton to Jonesboro the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth had reason to know that his followers possessed the fighting qualities of heroes when the shock of battle came.

Kenesaw Mountain was fought June 27, and the conspicuous part performed by the Regiment in that bloody conflict entitles it to some special mention. The Brigade charged in column of Regiment against Hardee's strongly protected fortifications, the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth in advance, with supports on right and left. At a few minutes before 9 A. M., the command "forward" was given, and the lines moved with marked precision, first at quick and then at double-quick step, until, on reaching a descent they encountered a marshy creek, lined on either side with shrubs and thickly matted vines. Already under the enemy's fire, the command relieved itself as rapidly and orderly as possible from this confusion and again turning its face towards the foe, on and up the brave men rushed, with McCook, their gallant leader, at their head, until, first encountering a line of abatis, then of Cheval de frise, some of them gained the parapet and struggled to scale the works. Here McCook fell, mortally wounded, and Colonel Harman, taking instant command, sought to encourage the wavering hopes of his followers, and secure the victory that seemed so nearly and so worthily won, when a rebel bullet pierced his heart, and his remains were borne from the field. Shot and stoned down, completely exhausted by the distance covered and the impetuosity of the charge, the brave men who survived it reformed their lines a few steps to the rear, and partly under cover of the hill, where they immediately began the construction of earthworks. The loss to the Regiment was 120 killed and wounded in the short space of twenty minutes, nearly half of whom, including five officers, were killed outright, and four officers wounded.

On the same day, Lieutenant Colonel Langley, who had been serving on the Fourteenth Corps staff, assumed command of the Regiment, and Colonel Dilworth, of the Eighty-fifth Illinois, of the Brigade.

June 29th, the dead still lying in great numbers between the lines, were in such a state of putrefaction as to have become offensive to both armies, when Colonel Langley, with nothing whiter than a Chicago Tribune for a flag of truce, shook that red-hot war sheet in the face of the enemy until they ceased firing when a truce was arranged for the burial of the dead.

On the morning of July 3, the enemy having been again "flanked out" of a position from which they could not be driven, the Regiment with others pursued through Marietta and on to the Chattahoochie River, where, July 5, it helped drive him inside his strong works.

July 18, crossed the Chattahoochie on pontoon at Paces' Ferry, advanced against strong skirmishing to Peach Tree Creek, where the Regiment fought on the 19th, and in a spirited charge at dusk drove the enemy from a very commanding height, and from this point on through the siege of Atlanta until the signal victory at Jonesboro September 1, the command was practically under fire every hour. At Jonesboro the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth was the center and guide Regiment in the assault, the Twenty-second Indiana on the right, and Fifty-second Ohio on the left, with the Eighty-fifth, Eighty-sixth and One Hundred and Tenth Illinois in second line. Just at the onset Colonel Dilworth was severely wounded and the Brigade command fell to Lieutenant Colonel Langley who led a most daring charge over the strong works and right into the heart of the enemy's camp, capturing in connection with the Second Brigade on the left an entire rebel Brigade, its general and staff, numbering in all about 1,700 men and a battery of four guns. This movement in connection with others so effectually broke the enemy's lines that he withdrew his remaining forces under the cover of night. Jonesboro proved the fall of Atlanta, for early next morning Hood moved out and with the Twentieth Corps our Slocum marched in.

A short rest at Atlanta and the Regiment with the Division made a long and laborious raid as far as Florence, Ala., in pursuit of Forrest's Cavalry, returning to Atlanta November 14, and on the 16th started with Sherman in his famous march to the sea, in which latter enterprise the Regiment did its full share of duty, procured and consumed its full share of subsistence. Another rest at Savannah and Sherman's avenging hosts were turned loose on the "sacred soil" of South Carolina, and in thoroughly "subjugating" that State it would be safe to say the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth was behind no other regiment. In North Carolina its progress was checked on the 16th of March, 1865, at Averysboro, and stubbornly resisted on the 19th, 20th and 21st, at Bentonville. The fighting at the latter place, especially on the 19th, was very severe, a full share of which fell on the Regiment, when it not only well sustained its past reputation for courage, but justly added new laurels to its victorious crown.

Goldsboro was reached March 23, and on the 10th of April, amid the shouts of joy over Richmond's fall the last hostile march was begun and ended on the 26th day of the same month, with the surrender of Johnson and his entire army to the government whose authority they had defied and whose flag they had so wantonly insulted.

A peaceful "on to Richmond" from the south, then to Washington, the "grand review," the muster out June 9, 1865, the homeward ride to Chicago, the cordial welcome, the final payment and discharge, the good-by grasp of comrades whose souls were knit together and welded in the fires of battle were among the closing scenes of a great military drama, in which the One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Infantry bore an honorable part. Henceforth it lives only in history and memory.

The casualty list of the Regiment is exceptionally large and the graves of its honored dead mark its meandering march from Covington, Ky., to Raleigh, North Carolina, and with those of our revolutionary fathers will ever remain the heritage of a grateful and patriotic people.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SIXTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Infantry Illinois Volunteers was organized at Alton, Ill., by Colonel Jonathan Richmond, and mustered in September 4, 1862.

Moved November 20, to Columbus, and thence to Bolivar, Tenn. On 28th, moved to Lagrange. On December 19, six companies marched to Jackson, Tenn., to reinforce that place, and, afterwards, moved to Humboldt, where they were joined by the remaining four companies, January 20, 1863. On 25th March, moved to Jackson, and was assigned to Second Brigade, Colonel James M. True commanding; Second Division, Brigadier General Nathan Kimball commanding; Sixteenth Army Corps, Major General Harlbut commanding. Moved by rail to Memphis, and embarked for Vicksburg Landing, at Haines' Bluff, June 2.

Embarked for Helena, Ark., July 24. Marched with General Steele's Army, participating in the capture of Little Rock, September 10. Marched to Duvall's Bluff, October 24, 1863, and Colonel Richmond was assigned to the command of the post. On August 19, 1864, marched, via Little Rock, to Pine Bluff, Ark. February 12, 1865, moved to mouth of White River. Returned to Pine Bluff, June 4, and July 12, 1865, was mustered out.

The Regiment participated in the siege of Vicksburg. Six companies engaged in skirmish line, near Humboldt, Tenn., December 21, 1862, in capture of Little Rock, Ark., and in the fight at Clarendon, Ark., June 26, 1864.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-SEVENTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Infantry was raised under the call of President Lincoln for 500,000 volunteers in the summer of 1862. Company A was recruited in Kendall county; Company B, in and around Chicago; Company C, at Elgin; Company D, in Grundy county; Company E, at St. Charles; Company F, at Plano; Company G, in Chicago; Company H, about Lyons; Company I, at Elgin and Company K, at Aurora and Big Rock. The Regiment was mustered in this service at Camp Douglas, Sept. 6, 1862.

The Regiment performed a considerable amount of guard duty in Camp Douglas, where the Harper's Ferry prisoners were sent in the fall of 1862.

The command drew a full complement of English Enfield rifles in the beginning of November, 1862, and on the 9th of that month departed over the Illinois Central railway for Cairo, where it went on board the steamer Emerald, and landed at Memphis, Tenn., on the 13th. Went into camp near the city and was assigned to the First Brigade, Second Division, Fifteenth Army Corps, then a part of the right wing of the Army of the Tennessee.

On the 26th of November, departed on the expedition under General W. T. Sherman, in pursuit of Generals Price and Van Dorn. Marched to the neighborhood of Oxford, Miss., where the command was reviewed by General Grant, and returned without encountering the enemy, to Memphis, on the 13th of December.

On the 20th of that month, embarked on the Mississippi River as a part of the expedition under General Sherman destined to operate against Vicksburg. Reached the Yazoo December 25, and was engaged in the operations on the Chickasaw Bayou from December 26 to January 1, during which its losses were one man killed (William Elmy of Company H) and seven wounded. A number of men soon after died of malignant measles.

The Regiment was with the expedition under General McClelland, which captured Arkansas Post, January 11, 1863, and was one of the first to plant its colors on the enemy's works. Its losses in the assault were two killed, twenty wounded and nine missing.

Following this expedition the army encamped at Young's Point, and on the peninsula opposite Vicksburg, where the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh performed picket and fatigue duty, working on the famous "canal" begun by General Butler, and during the next three months having a great amount of sickness in its ranks, and losing a large number of men by disease. At times the Regiment could report scarce a hundred men for duty.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh took part in the expedition to Steele's and Black Bayous in March, but, though suffering great hardships, returned without loss.

It was engaged in the movements to Grand Gulf, and in the rear of Vicksburg in May, and, when General Grant's army closed upon the doomed city on the 18th of the month, it formed a part of the line of battle of the Fifteenth Corps, on the right of the army.

It was in the bloody assaults upon the Vicksburg lines, May 19 and 22, on the first day planting its colors on the glacis of the rebel works, and maintaining its position until nightfall, when the troops were withdrawn. The losses of the Regiment in the two engagements were about 15 killed and 60 wounded.

During the siege of Vicksburg the Regiment was on detached duty at the Chickasaw Bayou until within a few days of the surrender, when it returned to the trenches, and was present at the surrender of the rebel stronghold, July 4, 1863.

On the night following the surrender all the men fit for duty, less than 50 in number, under Major Curtiss, marched with General Sherman's command, which drove General Joe Johnston from Jackson a few days later. During these operations the remnant of the Regiment was under the immediate command of Lieutenant Richmond, of Company E.

Following the defeat of Johnston, the Fifteenth Corps went into camp near Black River, about fifteen miles east of Vicksburg, where it remained until ordered, in September, to Chattanooga.

After the return of the Fifteenth Corps from Jackson, the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh was granted about twenty-five furloughs and leaves of absence. When the Regiment went into camp at Black River it had less than 100 men fit for duty, about 400 being in hospital on Walnut Hills, in the rear of Vicksburg.

On the 22d of September the Fifteenth Army Corps, under orders from General Grant, broke camp on Black River, and, marching to Vicksburg, took steamers for Memphis, from which point the troops marched overland, 300 miles, to Chattanooga, Tenn., where they began to arrive about the 15th of November. There was considerable fighting at Collierville, on the line of the Memphis and Charleston Railway, and in the neighborhood of Tusculum, Ala., but, in spite of all opposition, the Corps arrived in splendid fighting trim in front of General Bragg's army at Chattanooga, and took part in the battles of Lookout Mountain and Mission Ridge, Nov. 22 to 25, which ended in the total discomfiture of the rebel forces with heavy loss.

During the march through the mountains between Bridgeport and Chattanooga, the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh was on detached service guarding trains. Following the defeat of Bragg it formed a part of General Sherman's expedition for the relief of General Burnside, besieged in Knoxville, Tenn., by the rebel general Longstreet, marching to within a few miles of that place and returning to Bridgeport about the 18th of December.

In January, 1864, the Fifteenth Corps was cantoned along the Memphis and Charleston Railway, the Divisions occupying Huntsville, Woodville, Larkinsville and Scottsboro, in northern Alabama, the Second Division, to which the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh belonged, being stationed at Larkinsville.

During the latter part of January and the beginning of February, the Regiment took part in the forward movement of the Corps which crossed the Tennessee River near its southern bend, and made a demonstration in favor of General W. T. Sherman, then engaged in his famous raid from Vicksburg toward Meridian, Miss., at the head of the Seventeenth Army Corps.

During the encampment at Larkinsville a number of the officers of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh sent for their wives, who visited them in camp and remained several weeks.

A sad occurrence, and one which cast a gloom over the Regiment greater than the loss of twenty men in battle, was the murder of Joseph E. Corby, of Company I, who was found dead in front of our camp on the morning of January 24, 1864.

The Regiment broke camp at Larkinsville on the first day of May, 1864, and moved with its Division toward Chattanooga, which place was reached on the 5th, and on the evening of the same day encamped on the Chickamauga battle field, with the Army of the Tennessee, then under command of General J. B. McPherson.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh took part in the series of battles around Resaca, notably the one on the evening of May 14, when the Brigade to which it was attached carried the fortified line along the slope of Conasahee Creek by a desperate assault with the bayonet, in which the Regiment bore a conspicuous part and captured a number of prisoners. Immediately following this successful charge came the return assault of General Cleburne's rebel Division, which made three furious charges upon our lines only to be bloodily repulsed. In the operations in front of Resaca the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh lost one man killed, and three wounded.

In the sharp fighting among the Dallas Hills from the 26th of May to June 1, the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh was almost constantly under fire, showing conspicuous gallantry in the actions of 27th and 29th. Daniel T. Lane, of Company E, was seriously wounded on the 27th.

On the 4th of June the enemy abandoned his strong works at Dallas and fell back behind the still stronger position on and around Kenesaw Mountain, and Pine Hill, where he maintained himself for nearly a month, during which period it rained almost incessantly, making active operations nearly impossible.

On the 27th of June occurred the desperate assault of the Fifteenth Corps upon Kenesaw Mountain, which frowned a thousand feet above the heads of our men, covered with rifle pits, strong parapets, and death-dealing batteries. In this marvelous affair the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh stood up grandly under the most terrible fire it had ever encountered.

On the 2d of July the enemy abandoned the defenses of Kenesaw, and fell back to the Chattahoochee River. On the 6th our advance was in sight of Atlanta, and on the 12th and 13th the Army of the Tennessee was transferred by a rapid movement from the extreme right to the extreme left, and, following Garrard's cavalry column across the Chattahoochee near Roswell, entrenched itself, and compelled the rebel commander to retreat across the river into his Atlanta lines. The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh took part in all these movements.

The whole army now crossed the Chattahoochee, and the battle of Peach Tree Creek followed on the 20th of July. General John B. Hood had been placed in command of the rebel army on the 19th, in place of General Joseph E. Johnston, relieved by Jefferson Davis, and fighting became desperate.

In the bloody engagement of the 22d of July, east of Atlanta, in which the lamented McPherson fell, the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh was in the thickest of the fray, the Brigade to which it belonged being led into the fight by General Logan in person.

A few days later the Fifteenth Corps was transferred to the extreme right of the army, where, on the 28th of July, it was furiously assailed by a Corps of Hood's army, which was repulsed with terrible loss, leaving no less than 828 dead in front of our lines. The weight of the attack fell upon the Second Division of our Corps. The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, forming the extreme right of the army, and, being mostly on the skirmish line, came very near being captured. The timely arrival of a Brigade of the Fourteenth Corps, piloted upon the field by Robert Murphy, a drummer boy of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, saved the day. The losses of the Regiment on this day were Corporal John T. Bennett and William Peterson, of Company D, and Alfred N. Murdock and William Pooley, of Company A, killed, and 17 wounded and missing.

About this date Company G, Captain Sewell, was detailed at Corps headquarters as provost guard, a position which it held for several months. On the 31st of July, the morning report of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh showed only 92 men fit for duty carrying guns.

On the 3d of August, the Regiment took part in an attack on the rebel skirmish line to the west of Atlanta, in which it displayed its usual gallantry and lost a number of men, among whom were Sergeant Ira B. Whitney, of Company B, killed, and five men, including Captain A. C. Little, wounded. Elias Smithers, of Company E, died a few days later of wounds received.

The Regiment participated in the subsequent operations around Atlanta, including the great flanking movement of August 27, by which General Sherman placed the bulk of his army in the rear of General Hood and compelled him to evacuate Atlanta on the 2d of September. During the withdrawal of the army from the lines on the night of August 26, Sergeant Major William W. Lawton, of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, was mortally wounded and died the same night in the ambulance. This was the only casualty in the Army of the Tennessee during the movement.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh was hotly engaged in the battle of Jonesboro, below Atlanta, fought by Logan's Corps on the 1st of September, its officers and men displaying the greatest gallantry and inflicting some loss upon the enemy. In this battle the killed were Sergeant J. R. Grassmire, of Company I, James Griffin, of Company H, Levi Mead, of Company F, and Francis H. Chappell, of Company D, and a number wounded.

On the 9th of September the army encamped around the captured city, the Second Division of the Fifteenth Corps occupying East Point, about six miles southwest of Atlanta. About this date Captain Gillette received his commission as Major and Lieutenant Richmond was promoted Captain of Company E.

The army remained in its cantonments until the beginning of October, during which period General Sherman exchanged 2,000 prisoners with General Hood at Rough-and-Ready Station, below Atlanta. Among those exchanged were the boys of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh captured on the 22d of July.

General Hood began his famous raid upon the communications of Sherman's army about the 1st of October, and on the 3d of the month Sherman's army was in rapid pursuit of the rebel army which consisted of 25,000 Infantry and 10,000 cavalry. During the pursuit of Hood and the subsequent march through Georgia and South Carolina, the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh was commanded by Captain Charles Schryver, of Company F, the senior officer then with the Regiment. From August 14, 1864, to April 1, 1865, Colonel Curtiss was absent from the Regiment. A portion of this time he was in command of a provisional Division under General Schofield, in North Carolina. Captain Little was also absent on furlough during the same period, and was in command of 400 men under General Schofield in North Carolina during a part of the time.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh accompanied Sherman's army on its grand march through Georgia and the Carolinas. From Atlanta to Columbia, South Carolina, it was on detached service, during which time it reported directly to the Headquarters of the Army of the Tennessee. At Columbia it returned to the Division, and took part in the operations, thence on to Goldsboro, N. C. During the month of January, 1865, it was encamped on the great rice plantations southwest of Savannah, Ga. It was present at the capture of Columbia, S. C., and in the advance upon Fayetteville, N. C. A number of its men were engaged in a severe skirmish, in which Francis B. Imhoff, of Company B, was killed, and R. R. Parkin, of Company I, wounded. At the severe battle of Bentonville, March 19 and 20, it was for twenty-four hours on the skirmish line, but escaped without loss. At Goldsboro, N. C., the army encamped for about fifteen days, during which time it was furnished with a complete outfit of new clothing. At Goldsboro, Colonel Curtiss, Captain Little and forty or fifty furloughed men, rejoined the Regiment. Here also Sergeant James G. Naid was mustered in as Adjutant, assuming his duties on the first of April, at which time Colonel Curtiss assumed command of the Regiment. Captain Little was soon after detailed on detached duty.

The army left Goldsboro in pursuit of General Johnston on the 10th of April, and reached Raleigh, the Capital of North Carolina, on the 14th, where it went into camp in and around the city. The Fifteenth Corps was encamped during most of the time until the last of the month about one mile north of the city.

General Joseph E. Johnston surrendered the remaining armies of the Confederacy on the 26th of April, and on the 29th the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh, in company with the Fifteenth Corps, commenced the march from Raleigh to Petersburg, Va., 168 miles distant, which point was made in just six days, equal to 28 miles a day. On the 13th of May the army passed through Richmond, and on the 21st reached the vicinity of Washington, D. C., and went into temporary camp on the hills west of Alexandria. The march through Virginia took the command through Petersburg, Richmond, Hanover Court House, Fredericksburg, Stafford, Dumfries and Occoquan. A portion of the One Hundred and Twenty-seventh visited Fort Darling, below Richmond, and made a flying visit to Mount Vernon, the home of Washington.

The One Hundred and Twenty-seventh took part in the grand review at headquarters and was specially complimented for its fine discipline and military bearing. During the next fourteen days the command was encamped near Fort Slocum north of the city, where it was mustered for discharge on June 4th by Captain Potter, of the Seventieth Ohio Volunteers.

On the 7th of June the Regiment left Washington for Chicago. It was finally mustered out on the 17th of June, 1865, after an arduous service of almost three years. The actual number of men finally discharged was about 240, all that remained of the 900 with which the Regiment left Camp Douglas in November, 1862.

ORDER FROM WAR DEPARTMENT.

CAIRO ILL., April 1, 1863.

SPECIAL ORDER.

The One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Regiment of Illinois Volunteers having, in its short period of service of less than five months, been reduced from an aggregate of eight hundred and sixty to one hundred and sixty-one—principally by desertions—and there having been an utter want of discipline in it, the following officers are hereby discharged from the service of the United States, to take effect the 4th inst., viz:

Colonel Robert M. Hundley, Lieutenant Colonel James D. Pulley, First Lieutenant George W. Akin, R. Q. M., Chaplain Archibald T. Benton.

Captains William J. Moyers, William G. Durham, Jefferson S. Allen, John Brown, Joel H. Swindell, Robert M. Allen, William Huffstutler, Aaron A. Bell, William A. Fry, Joshua Pemberton.

First Lieutenants James V. Moore, John A. Eusminger, Sibron A. Walker, Zachariah Hudgens, Iradell A. Williams, Jesse A. McIntosh, William L. Stilley, Samuel Upchurch.

Second Lieutenants Martin A. B. Dial, Joseph M. Dorris, Jasper A. Crain, Addison Reese, Martin W. Robertson, N. E. Norris, Joseph B. Fuller, Wiley W. Hall, and Samuel Pemberton.

The few remaining men of this Regiment will be consolidated into a Detachment, under First Lieutenants W. A. Lemma, William M. Cooper, and Assistant Surgeon George W. French, for transfer to some other Illinois regiment, to be designated by Major General Grant, commanding the Department of the Tennessee.

Brigadier General A. Asboth, commanding District of Columbus, Kentucky, will order an officer of the regular army to this place, to critically inspect the Detachment, to muster out of the service such old men and others who, by reason of defects, should not have been mustered into the service.

By order of the Secretary of War.

L. THOMAS, Adjutant General.

Official: E. D. TOWNSEND,

Assistant Adjutant General.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-NINTH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Infantry was organized at Pontiac in August, 1862, by Colonel George P. Smith, and was mustered into the United States service September 8. Five companies were from Livingston county, four from Scott county and one from Rock Island county.

On the 22d of September the Regiment left Pontiac with 927 officers and men, and reported at Louisville, Ky.

On October 3, marched in pursuit of Bragg, via Frankfort and Danville, to Crab Orchard. On 17th, the Brigade was transferred to Tenth Division, Brigadier General R. S. Granger commanding. Commenced the return march October 20, and moved, via Danville, Perryville and Mumfordsville, to Bowling Green. On 21st November, the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth was sent as garrison to Mitchellville, Ky.

From the middle of December, 1863, till the first of June, 1864, the One Hundred and Twenty-ninth guarded the railroad from Bowling Green, Ky., to Gallatin, Tenn., during which time it had frequent collisions with the rebels in repelling their attack on the railroad.

From the 1st of June till the 22d of August, it garrisoned Fort Thomas at Gallatin, which was threatened by Morgan and his entire command who approached to within about eight miles of the works, and then thinking discretion the better part of valor the celebrated General beat a retreat.

On the 23d of August, it took up the line of march for Nashville, and remained there in garrison till the 24th of February, 1864; then took the line of march for Wauhatchie Valley, arriving about the middle of March. Previous to this it was assigned to the First Brigade of the Third Division of the Twentieth Corps.

On May 3d, it left with Sherman's grand army for Atlanta. On the march it participated in the battles of Resaca, Buzzard's Roost, Lost Mountain, Dallas, Peach Tree Creek and Atlanta. From the latter place it started upon the grand march to the sea, and bore its share in that and in the subsequent campaign in the Carolinas. It took a conspicuous part at Averysboro and Bentonville. At the conclusion of this campaign the Regiment marched to Washington and participated in the national review there. From thence it proceeded to Chicago where it arrived the 10th of June, 1865, when it received final payment and discharge.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTIETH INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Thirtieth Regiment was organized at Camp Butler, and was mustered into the service on the 25th of October, 1862.

The companies comprising this Regiment were organized in the counties of Alexander, Bond, Clark, Christian, Coles, Edgar, Monroe, Sangamon, Richland and Lawrence.

The Regiment having received its outfit of clothing and arms, left Camp Butler November 11, for Memphis, Tenn., where it arrived on the 17th, and was assigned to the Sixteenth Army Corps, commanded by Major General Hurlbut. It remained at Fort Pickering, near the city, until March 27, 1863, during which time it did provost duty in the city, and was only relieved at the urgent request of Colonel Niles, for active service in the field. While on duty at this place its loss by death was severe, as is the case with most new regiments upon taking the field. But more particularly owing to the prevalence of the measles and the small-pox, which carried off many of the best men.

On the 27th of March the Regiment embarked on the J. C. Snow, for Milliken's Bend, La., where it arrived on the 31st. It remained at this point while the army was organizing for the Vicksburg campaign, and moved with that army on the 15th of April, 1863, the Thirteenth Army Corps in advance, and crossed the Mississippi River at Bruinsburg on the morning of May 1, and marched immediately for Port Gibson, where the advance of the Thirteenth Corps had early engaged the enemy. Here the Regiment became engaged for the first time and behaved like veterans. Captain J. R. Johnson, of Company H, was here wounded in the thigh by a piece of shell. The enemy were handsomely repulsed after a stubborn resistance, and left their dead and wounded on the field.

The Regiment continued with the army through Mississippi, and was again engaged at Champion Hills on the 16th of May, and on the 17th at Black River Bridge, at both of which places the enemy were driven from the field. On the 18th it marched on Vicksburg and at night encamped within three miles of the city, and one half of the Regiment was on picket all night in front of one-half of the Division, the Twenty-third Wisconsin picketing the other half. During the fight the enemy burned all the buildings outside of their defense, which illuminated the sky and was a grand and imposing sight.

On the morning of the 19th the Regiment was ordered forward in line of battle, in concert with the grand army, which, like a fiery serpent, surrounded the city, and soon compelled the enemy to retire within their defenses.

On the 22d of May, Captain William H. Colby was killed, in a charge made, with many gallant soldiers of the Regiment killed and wounded; and almost daily during the siege was some soldier either killed or wounded, carried to the rear for burial or medical assistance. For forty-eight days constant vigilance and a gradual approach upon the enemy were the order of the day. On the morning of the glorious 4th of July the Regiment welcomed the joyful intelligence of the surrender of the enemy.

On the morning of the 5th the Regiment again took up line of march for Jackson, Miss., where the enemy were found entrenched behind very formidable works, but by a vigorous siege of ten days were compelled to withdraw, burning and sacking the town as they left. The Regiment was then ordered to return to Vicksburg, and encamped on the bank of the river, where the Thirteenth Army Corps was permitted to rest and reorganize, and was then transferred to the Gulf Department, under the command of General Banks.

The One Hundred and Thirtieth remained near New Orleans until the middle of October, 1863, when it was ordered, with the remainder of the army, across to Berwick Bay, and from thence up Bayou Teche, at which time a Texas expedition was under way. After proceeding up the Bayou about 80 miles, the Regiment was brought to a halt at New Iberia, and, with the Ninety-ninth Illinois, remained on duty at this place, under command of Colonel Niles, while a large portion of the army moved on 25 miles farther up to Vermillionville. The Regiment remained at New Iberia until about the 1st of December. While here Colonel Niles resigned, and the Regiment lost a gallant officer. No braver man than he ever stood before the enemy, and true patriotism inspired his every action. Upon his departure the Regiment passed some very complimentary resolutions. Adjutant John B. Hay also resigned on the 26th of October, and E. S. Dewey was appointed in his place. The command of the Regiment now devolved upon Major John B. Reid, Lieutenant Colonel James H. Matheny having been absent nearly the entire time. The Regiment was then ordered to the coast of Texas, where it spent the winter of 1863-4 at Decrow's Point, on Matagorda Peninsula. In February, 1864, it returned to Berwick Bay, and then started on the ill-fated Red River expedition. At the battle of Mansfield the Regiment lost severely in killed and wounded, and nearly its entire number captured and taken to Tyler, Texas, where they remained thirteen months as prisoners of war, and were only paroled a few days before the surrender of the entire rebel army. At the battle of Mansfield Lieutenant-Colonel John B. Reid, in command of the Regiment, and the only field officer present, was severely wounded, a rifle ball passing through the upper lobe of his right lung and the entire body. He was taken to a rebel hospital, where he so far recovered as to be paroled in ten weeks from the date of his capture. He returned to the Union lines, and, by the time he was exchanged, was able to again take command of the Regiment. Captain F. D. Phillips was also severely wounded in the knee, and afterwards died from the effects of the wound. He was a noble, brave young officer, and the service lost a valuable and gallant patriot. Captain C. T. Mullen was also wounded, and died while in the hands of the rebels. The remainder of the Regiment, but a handful of men, who succeeded in escaping, returned with the army to the Mississippi River, and was afterward ordered to New Orleans, where it was put on duty during the winter of 1864-5, and in January, 1865, was temporarily consolidated with the Seventy-seventh Illinois, with whom it was connected during the Mobile campaign, and participated in the attack and siege of Spanish Fort and Fort Blakely. This was the second regiment that landed on the Mobile shore of the bay, and upon landing, found the enemy had evacuated the city, and, following them, had a slight skirmish with their cavalry—one of the last skirmishes of the war. It went up the Tombigbee River as far as McIntosh Bluffs, where the enemy once had a navy yard. Here it remained until the surrender of Taylor's command and the return of the rebel fleet down the river, when it embarked on the fleet and returned to Mobile. On the 11th of July, 1865, the old Seventy-seventh was mustered out, and the old One Hundred and Thirtieth reorganized into a battalion of six companies, by the untiring energy of Lieutenant-Colonel John B. Reid, who was anxious it should be mustered out as the old regiment. On the first week in August, 1865, it was ordered to New Orleans for muster out, which was accomplished on the 15th of August, and it at once embarked for Springfield, Ill., where, on the 31st of August, it was paid off and finally discharged. For gallant services several officers were here promoted, among the number Lieutenant-Colonel John B. Reid to Colonel, and Captain J. W. Wilkin to Major.

Colonel Reid was the only field officer who remained with the Regiment from its organization to muster-out.

Colonel Nathan Niles was a man in the prime of life, a lawyer by profession and of considerable reputation, well known to many of the citizens of this State. He was a resident of Belleville, St. Clair County, Ill. His home is still in Belleville.

Lieutenant-Colonel James H. Matheny was also a lawyer, well-known, and a resident of Springfield, Ill. He was at one time a law partner of President Lincoln. During the last twelve years he has served the people of Sangamon county as Judge.

Major John B. Reid was, at the time of enlistment, clerk of the Circuit Court of Bond county, elected in 1860. At this time he is postmaster at Greenville, Ill.

Adjutant John B. Hay was a lawyer, a resident of Belleville, Ill. Since the war he has been Prosecuting Attorney for the Twenty-fourth Judicial Circuit, has served two terms in Congress, and been postmaster at Belleville.

ORDER OF CONSOLIDATION.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF, NEW ORLEANS, January 14, 1865.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 14. } Extract.

The Seventy-seventh and One Hundred and Thirtieth Illinois Volunteers will be consolidated into and known as the Seventy-seventh Illinois Volunteers. Brigadier General T. W. Sherman, commanding Defenses New Orleans (who is charged with the execution of this order), will designate such commissioned officers as will be retained in service, to command the new organization. All other officers will be at once mustered out of service.

All supernumerary non-commissioned staff officers, all supernumerary non-commissioned officers who were appointed, as such, at the date of the original organization of their respective companies, will be mustered out of service. All other surplus non-commissioned officers, who have been appointed since the original organization, will be reduced.

By command of Major General HURLBURT.

HISTORY OF ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FIRST INFANTRY.

The One Hundred and Thirty-first Infantry was composed of men from the counties of Hamilton, Gallatin, Hardin, Pope and Massac. They were enlisted during the months of July and August, 1862. By order of Governor Richard Yates, it was organized and went into camp at old Fort Massac, Massac county, Illinois, in September, 1862, and remained there in camp until November 13, when it was mustered into the United States service. The Regiment then numbered 815 men, excluding officers.

While at Fort Massac the Regiment was without tents, camp equipage or guns, except a few inferior guns borrowed for use in guard duty and squad drill, but notwithstanding its limited outfit, the guard duty and squad drill was kept up. During this time the measles broke out in camp, and about 100 of the men were prostrated thereby, nearly all of whom either died or were afterwards discharged for disability caused thereby.

After the Regiment was mustered into the service, it was ordered to hold itself in readiness to proceed to Memphis, Tenn., which order was received with joy by all the men, notwithstanding quite a number of them were sick at the time.

On December 2 it embarked on the steamboat Iowa, and proceeded to Cairo, where the men were furnished with guns of inferior quality, being the Harper's Ferry flint-lock guns, and three different sizes in calibre, altered for caps, which were received under protest. The Regiment then went on same boat to Memphis, arriving there December 7. It reported to General Hurlbut, and was ordered into camp about two and a half miles southeast of the city, where it found quarters in old stables and outbuildings. Tents were then issued, and a portion of the guns were exchanged for Springfield rifles. The Regiment was assigned to General Landrum's Brigade of General A. J. Smith's Division of General Sherman's Corps, being the Second Brigade of the First Division of the Seventeenth Army Corps of the Army of the Tennessee, which was then preparing to move on Vicksburg.

On December 20 the Regiment again embarked on the steamboat Iowa and took position in the fleet, and moved down the Mississippi. Landed at Milliken's Bend, La., on December 24, where the Regiment was engaged in picket duty until December 27, when it again embarked on the same boat, and with a portion of the fleet moved up the Yazoo River to near Haines' Bluff, where it took part in the engagement at that place, which ended January 1, 1863. It then returned on board the transports, and that night the whole fleet was ordered to Milliken's Bend, where it remained until January 4.

General John A. McClernand now taking command of the Corps, it started on an expedition against Arkansas Post, moving up the Mississippi on the transports to the mouth of White River, thence through the pass and up the Arkansas River about thirty miles to within about three miles of Arkansas Post, where it disembarked about noon of January 10. The One Hundred and Thirty-first Regiment then marched until about 11 o'clock at night, only making a distance of four miles, the march being through swamps covered with underbrush and fallen timber; then coming to a halt, it formed in line of battle and remained so until daylight next morning. During all this time a snow and rain storm raged unceasingly, and the soldiers were drenched to the skin. On the following day a greater portion of the Regiment was engaged on detached duty, assisting heavy artillery through the swamps; the remainder continued in line of battle on the extreme left. This point the enemy shelled continuously during a greater part of the day, with the view of driving the Union forces from this portion of the woods, and making their escape through the same; but failing to do this, the shelling ceased about 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The actual fighting at Arkansas Post lasted only about four hours, when the fort with its entire forces surrendered.

The Regiment remained at this point four days, burying the dead, filling ditches, and demolishing fortifications; during all of which time it was exposed to one continuous storm of rain and snow. On January 15th it again embarked on the steamboat Iowa and headed toward Vicksburg. On January 23d, landed at Young's Point, and two days later disembarked and went into camp on a spot surrounded by a levee. Here the rain poured down almost incessantly; the river was out of its bank, the surface of the river striking the outside of the levee was twelve inches higher than the ground encamped on. While here every man at all able for duty either worked to his full capacity with pick, shovel and axe in the canal through which it was expected to turn the river, or did duty on the picket lines, when to get to their posts on the picket lines they were compelled to wade in water to their waists. A large number of the men while encamped here were prostrated with sickness, some with measles, some with smallpox and some with pneumonia; and the regimental surgeon was unable for duty, and each day those free from sickness had the sad duty to perform of burying from one to five of their companions in the levee, who had died of disease. The Regiment remained at this point—its ranks continuing to be lessened by disease and death—until March 2, 1863, when, by order of General McClelland, it embarked on steamer Westwind for Memphis to recruit its health. Arrived at Memphis March 6th and went into camp at Ft. Pickering where he remained until May 9th.

The Regiment was now greatly improved in health and spirits, but its ranks only numbered about 400 men, the rest having been killed, died, or disabled and sent to hospitals. On May 10th it left Memphis on steamboat Golden Era for its third voyage to Vicksburg, accompanied by a gunboat and steamers Crescent City and Warren, which had on board the Sixty-third, Eighty-seventh and One Hundred and Twentieth Illinois Regiments. When near the foot of Island No. 82, the Golden Era being in advance and running near the shore was fired into by a band of about 100 guerrillas, who were secreted behind drift logs on the bank, wounding one man fatally and two slightly, and killing a mule. The men returned the fire but with what effect could not be told, as the band disappeared at the sight of a little cloud of smoke that floated up from the port hole of the gunboat, which was a short distance in the rear. The Regiment arrived at Sherman's landing on May 12th, and then on the 17th moved up to Milliken's Bend, and relieved the Thirtieth Ohio that was on duty there, and remained there guarding army supplies from the numerous guerrilla bands which infested that locality until May 24th, when it returned to Sherman's Landing on steamer Fanny Bullett and encamped in full view of the city of Vicksburg. A part of the Regiment then did duty on the picket line on the point opposite Vicksburg, and the balance in manning mortar boats.

On June 7, the One Hundred and Thirty-first, together with the One Hundred and Twentieth Regiment, was ordered to Milliken's Bend to support a colored regiment of about 300 or 400 men, and 120 men of the Twenty-third Iowa, who had been attacked by about 1200 rebels. In five minutes after the first tap of the drum, the One Hundred and Thirty-first Regiment was in line and in ten minutes they were on board the transports, the One Hundred and Twentieth Regiment soon following and in about one hour they were in line of battle at the Bend, but the rebels had retreated at sight of the gunboats. The Regiment remained there two days expecting an attack, but as none was made it was again ordered to Sherman's Landing, where it continued on its picket duty and manning mortar boats until the surrender of Vicksburg, July 4, 1863. Shortly after the surrender it moved to the city, and on July 20 it embarked for Paducah, Ky. Arrived there July 27 and went into camp until October 15, doing picket and camp duty and drilling.

On September 16, 1863, in compliance with a general order, the Regiment was consolidated into a battalion of four companies, and the Colonel, Major, Surgeon, Chaplain, ten officers of the line, and all surplus non-commissioned officers were mustered out, leaving the four companies full to the maximum and well officered, with Lieutenant Colonel R. A. Peter in command.

The Battalion had but little time to drill, being constantly on picket duty, and on October 15 was ordered by General A. J. Smith to move by rail to Mayfield, Ky., there to be joined by a company of cavalry and three pieces of artillery, all to move under command of Lieutenant Colonel Peter, to Murry, Ky., twelve miles southeast of Mayfield, and to go into camp and fortify at that point to give protection to the Union people there, who had been harrassed by frequent raids of guerrilla bands, and were then expecting an attack from General Forrest, who was reported within twelve miles with 500 or 600 men. The Regiment with about 200 men able for duty moved promptly and arrived at Mayfield on the 15th, but no cavalry or artillery reported to join it. Although by the failure of the cavalry and artillery to report, it left the Regiment at a great disadvantage, the forces which it expected to meet outnumbering it three to one, still nothing daunted, it moved on to Murry, where it arrived on the afternoon of the 16th, and hastily threw up temporary works in anticipation of an onset that night, but no attack was made that night, and next day, assisted by 50 negroes, they constructed such works as would enable them to repel the expected assault. The soldiers, however, were much dissappointed as no attack was made.

On October 20 the Regiment received orders to move without delay to Calloway Landing, on Tennessee River, and there take shipment for Vicksburg. It arrived at Calloway Landing on October 21, and shipped on steamboat Masonic Gem, and arrived at Vicksburg on October 29, and was then ordered by General Leggett to go into camp in the rear of the city and to clean up guns, arrange camps, etc., which order was promptly obeyed. After a few days spent in drilling, the Regiment received order No. 90, requiring the One Hundred and Thirty-first to consolidate with the Twenty-ninth Regiment, and by General Order No. 261, the consolidation was made: the men of the One Hundred and Thirty-first being placed in the different companies of the Twenty-ninth Regiment to fill them up, and all camp and garrison equipage and all quartermaster stores were turned over to the Quartermaster of the Twenty-ninth Regiment, on Nov. 14, 1863.

On December 26, 1863, Lieutenant Colonel R. A. Peter, Captains Thomas S. Woodward, James H. Young, Eugene B. Cropper, LaFayette Furtchell, and Lieutenant Calvin Mason resigned.

Thus ends the history of the One Hundred and Thirty-first Regiment as a separate body. While it was not its fortune, or misfortune, as you may choose to term it, to meet the enemy face to face in many conflicts, or to be tested in the crucible of a pitched battle, still its record is one to be proud of. The men who composed the Regiment were of the bravest character, and they never shrank from any duty imposed upon them. Whenever an order was given, it was promptly obeyed and executed with a will. Although no large number of the men were pierced by rebel bullets, still the death and disability list was very large on account of sickness, induced and brought on by exposure made necessary by the very nature of the duty and work assigned them.

ORDER OF CONSOLIDATION, ETC.

NATCHEZ, MISSISSIPPI, October 30, 1863.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 90. } Extract.

II. On the recommendation of Major General U. S. Grant, U. S. A., the One Hundred and Thirty-first Regiment Illinois Volunteers, is hereby consolidated with the Twenty-ninth Regiment Illinois Volunteers.

Major General J. B. McPherson, commanding Seventeenth Army Corps, will convene a Board of Examination at Vicksburg, Mississippi, with a view to the mustering out of the officers in both Regiments, who are found, upon examination, to be inefficient.

By order of the Secretary of War.

L. THOMAS, Adjutant General.

SPECIAL ORDER, }
No. 4. }

I. The One Hundred and Thirty-first Illinois Infantry having been consolidated with the Twenty-ninth Illinois Infantry, by Special Order No. 90, from the Secretary of War, dated Natchez, Mississippi, October 30, 1863, and the officers and enlisted men having reported, in compliance with Special Orders, No. 261, Headquarters Seventeenth Army Corps, of date November 14, 1863, the following assignments of officers are hereby made:

First Lieutenant.....	J. S. Armstrong.....	to Company H.
First Lieutenant.....	John F. McCartney.....	to Company D.
First Lieutenant.....	John Daily.....	to Company G.
Second Lieutenant.....	J. A. Peter.....	to Company H.
Second Lieutenant.....	John M. Lockwood.....	to Company A.
Second Lieutenant.....	Arden Ray.....	to Company I.
Second Lieutenant.....	W. H. H. Tindall.....	to Company K.

Assistant Surgeon Samuel Bumstead will report to Surgeon Samuel L. Cheaney for duty.

II. The non-commissioned officers and privates are assigned to such companies as they have already selected or been placed in.

III. All non-commissioned officers in excess of those needed to fill vacancies, are hereby reduced to ranks, until such time as they can be reinstated.

IV. Commanding officers are ordered to fill any vacancies that may occur, with those who have heretofore been non-commissioned officers in the One Hundred and Thirty-first Illinois Infantry. The reduction to ranks is made in compliance with verbal instructions from Adjutant General of the Army, to save to the service all men now enlisted in it.

V. All non-commissioned officers and privates not yet assigned, will be allowed the privilege of selecting their companies, and this selection must be made tomorrow at 12 o'clock, that the arrangements may be completed.

By order of Colonel L. Kent.
